THREATEN TO SHOOT UP CONVENTION

Sustain Governor Foss' Veto of the Trolley Merger

Governor Foss in vetoing the Western Trolley Merger bill uttered a sentiment which will live long in this community when he said that the time had come to put the Commonwealth's seal of disapproval upon the frequent proposals by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad TO DO ITS DUTY in consideration of FURTHER FAVORS from the Commonwealth.

Four years of lawlessness, mismanagement, broken promises and bad service from the Railroad Monopoly ought to make it ashamed to ask for any more power or the right to extend its poor service and bad management into any other field than that in which it is now failing to operate satisfactorily.

How long will there be found members of the Legislature who will believe, or pretend to believe, the promises of this railroad?

Every member of the Massachusetts Legislature knows certain important things concerning this Western Trolley Merger. He knows that it is part of the general aggrandizing and monopolistic scheme of the New Haven to get control of all the public utilities of New England, which include Railroads, Street Railways, Gas Companies, Steamboats, Electric Light Companies, Water Power Companies and every other kind of business which is a natural monopoly.

Every legislator knows that, if the New Haven is not stopped at the threshold of this menacing conspiracy, its power will make it absolute master of the political, business and even social concerns of New England. The legislator who is more or less of a politician knows this better than any one else. He knows the power of a railroad lobby and he knows how difficult it is EVEN NOW, with the New Haven's grand monopoly still unperfected, to defeat notoriously bad legislation which the New Haven wants and how almost impossible it is to pass legislation which everybody but the New Haven demands and which is clearly in the public interest, if the New Haven opposes.

Every legislator knows the power this railroad will exercise over business men of New England should they once get control of the bank deposits of the Electric Light Companies, the Gas Companies and Street Railways throughout New England. He knows that nearly every man in active and aggressive business is operating more or less on credit and he is blind if he does not appreciate what it means to allow a single railroad to have control of such enormous bank deposits that it can coerce nearly every business man who has loans in a New England bank.

Every legislator knows that the acquisition of these Western Trolleys will give the New Haven control of nearly all the trolleys in more than half of the territory of Massachusetts.

Every legislator knows that permitting a railroad to control Trolley Companies is a violation of the established policy of Massachusetts as fixed by our laws and as interpreted by the Railroad Commission.

Every legislator knows that the Railroad Commission has recommended the postponement of the consideration of this bill and that the need of the bill towns, which is the bribe and the excuse and the pretext in this bill, should be considered by a special commission.

Every legislator knows that Massachusetts is now in the act of investigating voluntary associations and that the report is not yet made upon these organizations and that this bill is utterly inconsistent with the purpose of the Commonwealth in making this investigation.

Every legislator knows that this Trolley Merger bill extends the monopoly of the New Haven Railroad beyond any previous limits and that the only excuse for it is the palpable bribe of extending some trolley lines into a few hill towns.

Every legislator knows way down in his innermost conscience that this bill contains a bad principle, violates a good policy and establishes a bad policy, extends a vicious monopoly, rewards broken promises and bad service, and if it should be passed over the Governor's veto would be an encouragement for the management of the New Haven to continue what the Governor has declared must stop, namely: THE FREQUENT PROPOSALS OF THE NEW HAVEN ROAD TO DO ITS DUTY ONLY UPON RECEIVING MORE SPECIAL FAVORS.

Every Democratic legislator knows that this bill is against the fundamental principles of the Democratic party and against the frequent declarations of the party platforms.

Year after year the Democratic platforms have fulminated against railroad monopoly and last year the Democratic State platform declared that we should "check all railroad monopoly."

Every progressive Republican legislator knows that this bill is utterly against the tenets to which he is struggling to keep the Republican party loyal.

Every legislator of whatever party or faction is bound by the highest duty to sustain the Governor's veto of this indefensible scheme for extending the New Haven monopoly and every Democratic legislator and every progressive Republican legislator has a special duty in this critical matter.

The AMERICAN congratulates Governor Foss upon having the courage of his convictions and upon thus flinging in the teeth of his enemies the false charge that he had made deals with anybody.

The AMERICAN warns those legislators who may hope for assistance from the New Haven in their campaign expenses for re-election that the good will and respect of their constituents will be worth a great deal more than any assistance which the New Haven could ever possibly render them and that their own self-respect will be worth more than both.

SUSTAIN THE GOVERNOR'S VETO!

KENTUCKY TAFT MEN GET SEATS

CHICAGO, June 11—The Republican National Committee today decided the Kentucky delegates-at-large contest in favor of Taft.

Edward C. O'Rear, one of the contesting delegates-at-large, presented the case for the Roosevelt men. He filed a bundle of affidavits to show that the charges that Taft appointees had captured the delegation by "gavel" methods in the convention, were true. Roosevelt had secured the delegates, he said, but they were not allowed to vote.

J. D. Cochran of Marysville, a Taft delegate-at-large, presented the defense.

With eighty-four contested delegates award to Roosevelt or Taft, the standing of the four candidates when the National Committee resumed work today was as follows:

Instructed or awarded to Taft, 577; pledged to Taft, 186; contested Taft delegates, 102; total, 575.

Instructed for Roosevelt, 363; pledged to Roosevelt, 80; contested Roosevelt delegates, 24; total, 457.

Pledged to La Follette, 36.

Instructed for Cummins, 10.

Delegates in convention, 1,078.

Necessary to nominate, 540.

Reorganization of the field forces of former President Roosevelt, the possible coming of the colonel himself and a shift of the floor leadership of the Roosevelt men before the national Republican committee

1,000 CRACK SHOTS READY FOR CHICAGO, DECLARES M'HARG

CHICAGO, June 11.—Commenting on the rumored intention of the national committee to unseat the entire Roosevelt delegation from California on a technicality, Ormsby McHarg, who has charge of Colonel Roosevelt's interests in the contests before the committee, says:

"If we are robbed of any delegates, there will be a political revolution in this country. We have had offers by telegraph of 1,000 crack shots from Oklahoma to march right down to the Coliseum and clean out the whole caboodle of those who could dare to do such a thing.

"If a man robs me of what is mine I will come pretty near seeing that he is punished for his crime. Let the national committee attempt such a thing and you'll see this city in a riot in no time."

A. W. SHAW AND MRS. STUART FOUND GUILTY

Shoe Manufacturer Convicted on Eight Counts and Woman on Seven.

Arthur Willis Shaw and Mrs. Georgia Mayo Stuart, who have been on trial in the Superior Court, before Judge Crosby for the past ten days, were found guilty by the jury, which made its report today.

Shaw was found guilty of stealing $10,000 from his shoe manufacturing concern of Prospect, Me. Mrs. Stuart was found guilty of receiving stolen goods. The counts against her charging her with being an accessory were dropped during the trial several days ago.

Shaw was found guilty in eight counts, and Mrs. Stuart in seven.

Woman in Tears.

Mrs. Stuart broke down and wept when she heard the foreman read the jury's verdict of guilty against her.

Shaw was committed to the Charles street jail in default of bail, the amount of which was raised by Judge Crosby from $9,000 to $12,000. Mrs. Stuart was held in $4,500, the amounts of the bonds also has furnished since the trial began. The bail for her was not raised, her counsel assuring the court that she would be in court for sentence.

When the sealed verdict was reported Mrs. Stuart and Shaw were seated side by side. Shaw wore the gray suit he has worn throughout the trial. Mrs. Stuart was gowned in black, with black veil and black picture hat.

Shaw paled and became nervous as the foreman pronounced him guilty. He did not look at Mrs. Stuart, who was weeping at his side.

Assistant District Attorney Thomas D. Lavelle, who has prosecuted the case against both defendants, asked Judge Crosby to increase the amount of Shaw's bail to $15,000 and of Mrs. Stuart's bonds to $8,000. The court decided on $12,000 bonds for Shaw, while the amount of Mrs. Stuart's bail was not changed.

Much Interest in Trial.

Today was the eighth day since the opening of the trial in the Suffolk Superior Court of Shaw and Mrs. Stuart. Mrs. Stuart was arrested February 19, the inspectors being forced to break down the doors of her apartment at the Albemarle Chambers to gain entrance. Shaw was arrested the following day in Los Angeles as a result of clews furnished the police in a letter made public by the AMERICAN.

The case has attracted widespread interest, not only because of Shaw's prominence, but because of the many unusual features in the case. Shaw was well known in Maine business circles, and had always been regarded as an upright man. Then he disappeared. That was on February 1.

It was a week, however, before the public learned of Shaw's disappearance. On February 7, T. W. Andick of Freeport, Shaw's partner in the shoe business, received a letter dated, on the outside, New York, and in it was postmarked North Station, Boston, Feb. 6. The letter was a remarkable document. It was later made public.

Played the Market.

In this letter Shaw confessed that he had played the market and lost. He said he had cleaned up $300,000 by his deals, but had lost it all and that he had used the money of the company. Then he

CITIZENSHIP ASKED BY A FRENCH COUNT

NEW YORK, June 11.—First citizen's papers have been taken out by Count Gabriel St. Georges de Lenoncour, a Frenchman, fifty-five years old, who said he was an agriculturist by profession and was living at present at No. 138 East Thirtieth street. The count was born in Paris and came to New York from Montreal in 1908.

FIRST PHOTOGRAPH OF NEW ENGLAND'S 1ST EUGENIC BRIDE

Mrs. Cutler, formerly Miss Anna Roisen of Providence.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 11.—The eugenic marriage last Saturday of Anna B. Rowen and Joseph R. Cutler, was the result of Miss Rowen's own views on the matter, it became known today. The two are on a honeymoon.

"I don't know how Anna first got the idea into her head," said a girl friend of hers today. "I do know, though, that for years she has been an enthusiast on matters of health. She is not a physical culture girl—not a faddle by any means but she is a good common sense healthy girl.

"Anna was adopted when she was only a little girl by Mrs. Jonathan Bailey of North Providence. Mrs. Bailey thought ahead of most of her friends, and she could understand the girl's point of view. She encouraged her in it."

The determination to present a physician's certificate with their application for a marriage license was reached when the young people received a copy of the views of Dean Sumner of Chicago on eugenics.

ASK GOVERNMENT AID FOR ALASKAN VOLCANO VICTIMS

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Delegate Wickersham of Alaska today introduced a joint resolution asking an immediate appropriation of $50,000 for the sufferers from the volcanic eruption on Kodiak Island in Alaska. He asked for the dispatch of revenue cutters to the scene of the disaster. A similar resolution will be introduced in the Senate by Senator Jones of Washington.

KODIAK, Alaska, June 9.—(Via tug to Seward), June 11.—Kodiak and Woody Island villages are buried under a foot of ashes as a result of the eruption of Katmai volcano, beginning last Thursday afternoon and lasting forty-eight hours. No lives have been lost here, but many other settlements near the volcano must have suffered indescribably.

The revenue cutter Manning was in port here when the eruption began, and furnished refuge for all the inhabitants of the town, 500 men, women and children. The Manning is now serving distilled water and government rations to the destitute people, the water supply having been polluted and buildings filled with ashes. The property loss will be enormous.

SANTIAGO, Cuba, June 11.—Cuban rebels have been decisively defeated by American marines and Republican troops in an attack on Guantanamo, according to reports received here today.

STATE INQUIRY ASKED; MORE RIOTERS JAILED IN L RAILWAY STRIKE

Faneuil Hall was filled this afternoon by striking unionized employes of the Boston Elevated Railway Company. They marched to the historic building from their various headquarters in the ten districts of the city.

The meeting was scheduled to start at 2 o'clock. The hall was crowded before that time. The principal speakers were William D. Mahon and Fred Fay, connected with the International Railway Men's Union. The meeting was most enthusiastic.

Cars were run on all of the divisions of the Elevated today, but there was a noticeable curtailment in the service. The situation was more peaceful than on any day since the strike began last Friday.

SEVERAL ARRESTS AS DYNAMITE SUSPECTS.

Several arrests were made in connection with the finding of dynamite or supposed dynamite that was supposed by the police to have been procured to damage property. But no dynamite was found on any union man nor could the police trace any of it to any of the strikers.

Organizer Fay, speaking about the finding of dynamite and the arrest of men in connection with it said:

"They found dynamite at the time of the Lawrence strike, and when they convicted a man of placing it where they found it they found that he was neither a union man nor in sympathy with the strike.

No Arbitration Result.

At the office of the State Board of Arbitration, which was appealed to by Mayor Fitzgerald to take action in the strike, it was learned that the board had conferred with President Hancock of the Elevated Company and with members of the union, but that nothing definite had come of it.

A committee of strikers called on the Mayor this afternoon and presented to him the arguments. The chief of their complaints is that they were denied the right to form a union.

More Rioters Jailed.

The courts continued to deal severely with prisoners brought before them today for interfering with cars. Judge Farmer, in the Boston Municipal Court today, sentenced Blake Edwards of No 18 Bullfinch street, to a year in the House of Correction for throwing a stone at a car.

Thomas O'Connell, a North Station guard, got four months for loitering and

TWO TROLLEYS IN COLLISION, SEVERAL HURT

Green Motorman Blamed for Roxbury Crash—Another Occurs in Dorchester.

Several were injured, more than a score were thrown to the ground and two hundred passengers were jarred in a collision of two surface cars at the junction of Walnut avenue and Warren street, Roxbury, at 1.50 o'clock today. It was stated that the accident was caused by a green motorman.

Two men who were hurt were taken to the City Hospital in an automobile. They gave their names as Charles Whittemore of No. 6 Paulton street, and Henry Hastings of Roxbury. A woman who was buried from her seat was taken to her home on Renwick street, Roxbury.

The cars were both on their way to the Dudley street terminal. One of them was marked Ashmont and the other Franklin Field. The latter, under the rules of the Elevated, had the right of way, and as it turned from Walnut avenue was struck by the Ashmont street car coming down Warren street. The latter, it was said by passengers, was in charge of a motorman who wore an emergency badge, indicating, apparently, lack of experience.

The cars came together sideways, the running board of the Ashmont street car being smashed against the front of the Franklin Field car. Both cars were crowded and many were hurled from the running boards to the street. Women in the cars fainted or became hysterical.

Pedestrians on the street hailed an automobile driven by the son of Mayor Stone of Quincy. In this Hastings and Whittemore were hurried to the City Hospital. It was said that both were suffering from the shock and contusions.

A second accident took place this afternoon at Fields Corner. A Geneva avenue car crashed into the side of a Quincy car, smashing the running board of both cars and shaking up the passengers on the Quincy car. Among those who suffered from shock and fright were:

Mrs. Catherine Nickerson and daughter, Mary, of Paterson street, Dorchester; William E. Coleman, of No. 1,862 Dorchester avenue; James Kelly of Everett and Herbert O. Cassidy of Atlantic. Two of the men in charge of the cars were said to be new men.

ARIZONA SWEPT BY CHAMP CLARK

PHOENIX Ariz., June 11.—Champ Clark carried Arizona by more than ten to one, according to an official canvass of votes cast in the recent primary. The returns for other candidates are classed as scattering. While Clark's vote runs between 3,000 and 6,000, Wilson received 330 votes and Bryan 40, with Harmon a shade ahead of Hyms. Reeve M. Jung received a majority of 500 for Democratic National Committeeman over Brady O'Neil.

TRAINMAN KILLED BY EXPRESS WHILE FLAGGING FREIGHT

While flagging a train near the Boston street bridge on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad yards, James K. Condrick was killed, being hit by an express rounding a curve. Condrick was twenty-two years of age, single, and resided on Columbia road, Dorchester. Condrick had just come in on a work train and got off at a crossing to flag a freight train.

ATTEMPTS SUICIDE IN MELROSE PARK

Alden J. Little, forty, of No. 202 Main street, Charlestown, attempted suicide in Pine Bank Park, Melrose, today, by shooting himself through the left temple with a revolver. He is in Melrose Hospital and his condition is critical.

FOSS NOW ASKS RAILROAD BILL

Governor Foss today signed the Zills pending before him for action. The House Committees on Metropolitan Affairs and Railroads will jointly report to that branch a bill based on the recommendations of the Governor increasing the powers of the Railroad Commission and providing for electrification of all standard gauge railroads operating in the metropolitan district where is no provision for the construction of a tunnel to connect the North and South Stations in this bill.

The Senate has already gone on record for the enlargement of the powers of the Railroad Commission, electrification and a tunnel, to be constructed by the city of Boston and leased to the railroads.

Representative Lomasney and other Boston members of the Legislature are opposed to any bill requiring the city to construct the tunnel. It was given out by an attache of the Governor's office today that if the House refuses to agree to a bill making provision for the building of a tunnel, he will send in a special message urging action on the matter. It was further said that the Governor is ready to keep the Legislature in session several weeks longer, unless he gets a satisfactory railroad bill from the Legislature.

Among the measures signed by the Governor today was the bill asked for by President Loclus Tuttle of the Connecticut River Railroad Company to permit the consolidation of the Vermont Valley and Sullivan County, N. H., railroads with his road; a bill to create a State Bureau of Labor and Industries; the Haverhill & Southern New Hampshire street railway bill to permit that company to acquire other street railways.

James Ryan, thirty-four, of No. 48 Chadwick street, Roxbury, was taken to the Relief Hospital at midnight, suffering from opium poisoning. He died at 7 a. m. The police are investigating a story that the man was connected with the carmen's strike.

The man was found unconscious on Warren bridge.

The man was first taken to City Square police station. A physician said he was suffering from opium. He was ordered to the Relief Hospital. He died there without regaining consciousness. The body was sent to North Grove street morgue. Medical Examiner Magrath prepared to perform an autopsy to determine the exact cause of death.

THOMAS W. LAWSON GOING TO CHICAGO

Thomas W. Lawson will go to Chicago. He has rooms engaged next to those of George W. Perkins of New York. He will go on Friday, one day ahead of the delegates. No announcement has been made of the plans which will be pursued while in Chicago, Mr. Lawson preferring to allow events to shape themselves after he arrives.

SEE BALANCING FEAT ON BOSTON COMMON

A crowd of 12,000 people gathered on the Common this noon to see the Marino brothers, who are now playing at Keith's, perform their balancing act. Oscar Marino, the older, balanced William on a sixty foot pole for three minutes. The sun shone in the performer's eyes and he was forced to stop before he could give his entire act.

causing a disturbance and a fine of $25 for intimidation. He appealed.

Rutherford McCarthy, No. 51 Myrtle street, Waltham, got four months and a fine of $75 for intimidation.

This is the severest punishment yet administered to disorders in connection with the strike.

It was expected that Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, would be present to take part in the meeting, but he sent word that he would be unable to get here at this time.

The parade this afternoon of the strikers was a test of the union's strength, and for that reason it was decided to hold it after the meeting, rather than before it, fearing that some of the assembled men would not reach the starting point in time to get in line, and the showing would suffer in consequence.

Protest Against Police.

A committee of three consisting of John J. O'Neil, Patrick Fitzgerald of Springfield and William French of Lynn representing the Boston Elevated strikers, called at the State House today and protested to Governor Foss against alleged police interference with the strikers in Somerville, Everett, Medford and Chelsea town.

The delegation was unable to see the Governor. They talked with Secretary Holman. Mr. Holman was told that the union men had heard that any striker seen wearing a uniform of the Elevated company was to be arrested. Mr. Holman called up Commissioner O'Meara, Mayor Fitzgerald of Cambridge and the mayors of other cities. He was told that no such orders had been issued.

At Police Headquarters in Boston it was stated that no attempt would be made to interfere with strikers marching to Faneuil Hall, and at the City Hall station it was said that the strikers had obtained permission to use the historic building for their meeting.

Ask State Inquiry.

Representative John J. Murphy drew an order to be introduced in the House of Representatives today providing that the Railroad Commission be directed to take immediate action in investigating present difficulties between the Elevated and members of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America, Local 589, to find that the board report findings, with recommendations, within five days to the State Board of Arbitration.

The latter board is required within twenty-four hours after receipt of this report to summons officials of the Boston Elevated and officials of the Amalgamated Association, and lay before them plans and specifications for immediate settlement of the difficulty.

About 200 new men employed to take the places of strikers were brought to Boston today by Fall River boat and train. They came in two lots. They had break fast in the South Station restaurant and were taken to the Bartlett street car barns.

Consider Arbitration.

General William A. Sancrant has declared his willingness to meet the State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation and discuss the strike.

His declaration was made when Mayor Fitzgerald sought to arrange for a conference between General Sancrant and the employes of the road. General Sancrant said:

"I cannot meet the men. I am willing, however, if the State Board desires, to meet the board and tell them our position."

The strikers have repeatedly declared their willingness and anxiety to refer to the State Board. The refusal of the Elevated to recognize their right to unionize, they declare, was the fundamental cause of the strike.

A much curtailed schedule of cars was maintained during the hours between midnight and daylight today. This is the first time since the strike began that cars have been run during these hours. A few cars came in, and at 3:05 cars left Adams square outward bound over the following routes:

Forest Hills, Mattapan, Jamaica Plain, Milton, East Boston, City Point, Everett, Malden, Medford, East Cambridge, Clarendon Hill, North Cambridge, Mount Auburn, Oak square and the Reservoir.

Charge Company Offers Money.

Union leaders today make charges that the company is offering money to many of the striking workmen, to induce them to come back to work. A letter was quoted which, it was alleged, one of the strikers had received. The letter read:

Mr.——You will be in receipt of $100 and a minimum daily wage of $2.50, also $3 daily for expenses, if you will immediately report to your superintendent.

Mr.——, Foreman.

This letter was given out by Strike Organizer J. C. Colgan of Chicago.

Employes on the East Boston division of the road's lines received an extra $5 with their pay. The money was given in appreciation of their loyalty during the strike, and for extra work which had been done.

William H. Schandberg, an Elevated striker, living at No. 501 Washington street, Brighton, was arrested by Sergeant Thomas Mullen of Brighton station today on suspicion in connection with the case of Hutchinson.

Michael Gallagher, expert on explosives of the Boston Fire Department, examined the two sticks later at Brighton police station and pronounced them dynamite, but of inferior quality.

FEAR DYNAMITE PLOT, ARREST 5

Five men were arraigned in the Malden Court today, charged with interfering with the running of cars in Medford at Boston avenue and Medford Hillside. Four were former motormen and conductors and the fifth a painter, who had at one time worked for the Elevated Company.

The arrests were the result of a tip that reached Police Captain Ewell of the Medford police that a car was to be dynamited in the darkness of early morning. The captain and four patrolmen went to the spot where they had been told the dynamiting was to be done—Boston avenue and the Medford Hillside.

Police in Hiding.

The policemen concealed themselves. A crowd of a dozen or more gathered about the railroad. Policeman Frazer had that beat, but he knew nothing of the report to the police of a dynamite plot. Captain Ewell tried to warn Patrolman Frazer so that he would not interfere with the plan to catch the men, if the tip proved correct.

Frazer could not be found at first and he appeared before any car arrived, and the crowd started to scatter. Then Captain Ewell and his men dashed out and the five arrests were made.

The plan, as it was told to the police, was to have a man in the plot on the car. When the car reached the spot this confederate was to stop the car and get off. Then the dynamite was to be placed in front of the car while the crowd dispersed.

No Dynamite Found.

No dynamite was found in the possession of any of the prisoners. A search of the spot failed to disclose any dynamite. A further search of the vicinity today was made for dynamite, but none was found.

The five men declared that they knew nothing about dynamite. The prisoners were:

Daniel Carroll, a motorman, 41 years old of No. 8 Laconia street, Charlestown; Eugene Chrysafe, a brakeman, 21 years old, of No. 14A Austin street, Charlestown; Thomas J. Harrington, a conductor, 19 years old, of No. 1 Holden road, Charlestown; Charles A. Swanson, a painter, 27 years old, of No. 117 Medford street, Somerville, and Carl W. Costello, conductor, 20 years old, of No. 20 Benedict street, Somerville.

The five prisoners were arraigned before Judge Bruce and released without bail for a hearing on Friday. Judge Bruce, addressing the defendants in court, said:

You may work or not, as you please, but you have no right to commit violence of any kind. I shall give the extreme penalty within my power to all cases of violence. We have not yet reached into an absolute condition of lawlessness. I warn you to be careful.

Two sticks looking like dynamite, each eight inches long, were found on the trolley-car track on Commonwealth avenue, near Chiswick road in the Aberdeen section of Allston today. An inbound electric car ran over both sticks, but there was no explosion. The police of Station 14, Brighton, in charge of Captain Hall, at once started an investigation.

The police said the sticks were the same length as the dynamite found in the home of John R. Hutchinson of Brighton. Hutchinson was arrested last night by Sergeant Mullen of the Brighton police on a charge of having the dynamite in his possession. The police think a plot was on foot to blow up the Oak square car barn. It was said Hutchinson's father was formerly employed by the Elevated. The police declared the dynamite found in Hutchinson's home was 60 per cent. pure and was powerful enough to destroy an ordinary building.

Gompers Won't Arrive Today.

William D. Mahon, president of the International Street Railway Men's Union, received a telegram today from Washington stating that President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor was detained in Washington and would not be able to come to Boston today, but that he would come soon. The telegram stated that the American Federation of Labor had pledged its moral and financial strength to the strikers.

President Mahon made this statement:

"We are prepared to prove without the question of a doubt to any fair tribunal or arbitration board that the Boston Elevated Railway Company denied the men in their employ the right to organize and discharged 200 of them for joining the union of their craft.

"We are also prepared to prove that less wages is being paid by the Boston Elevated Company than in seventy-five other cities, in some of which only a three-cent fare is charged while in Boston the fare is five cents.

"We are prepared to prove that hundreds of motormen and conductors commence their day's work at 6 and 7 o'clock in the morning and do not complete their work until 12 or 1 o'clock at night, covering a period of 17 and 18 hours, although paid for only ten hours' work."

WOMAN AND SHAW GUILTY

hinted at suicide to end it all, saying he might take a trans steamer and drown himself in mid-ocean.

"It is all over but the mourners," he wrote Amick. "I have not courage enough left to say good-bye. Tell my wife to collect my insurance policy."

Some of his friends believed what Shaw wrote, but the police authorities immediately became suspicious and declared that the letter was part of Shaw's scheme to escape and enjoy what money he had saved up.

Experts went over Shaw's books and found they were in an alarming condition. The books, according to the accountants, showed that Shaw was short on his accounts by thousands of dollars. This fact, coupled with the belief that he had no intention of taking his life, led to warrants being sworn out against him, charging him with the larceny of $19,000. Mrs. Stuart had not then been connected with Shaw's absence.

The next step in the case revealed to the police Shaw's double life. It was claimed he was aided in cheating his firm by a woman, and she was further charged with helping him when he fled.

Letter Gives Clew.

Mrs. Stuart was later quizzed by the Boston police. Deputy Watts visited her at her apartment in the Albemarle Chambers and had a long talk with her. The police claimed they had learned that on February 5 Mrs. Stuart had drawn out $7,000 from the Old Colony Trust Company and that this sum was put in her keeping by Shaw. The police said she met Shaw at the Adams House and turned the money over to Shaw. The letter took the 1 o'clock train for New York that afternoon.

Mrs. Stuart was arrested, then indicted and released on $2,500 bail.

The day after Mrs. Stuart's arrest, the police received their first tip of Shaw's whereabouts. This was from a letter published by the AMERICAN. The letter was written by Shaw in Los Angeles and sent to Mrs. Stuart in Boston. The letter was remarkable. Not only did it give Shaw's address in the California city, where he was found by the police, but it was sensational in its character, sentimental in its strain and revealed how complete was Shaw's infatuation for Mrs. Stuart.

From what Shaw wrote it was his last letter to Mrs. Stuart.

"I shall write no more," he told her, "because you will be on your way to me with the money."

Shaw wrote that she should not leave any money behind, not a cent.

Shaw was apparently impatient, for he wrote:

"Talk about waiting until September. I would not do it for $1,000,000. I could not do it. I must be with you, or, or, or—God only knows what I would do; I don't. So, dearest, you must come."

Shaw was indicted on the larceny charges and was finally brought back to Boston from California on March 22. The charge was made against Mrs. Stuart that she was an accessory. The trail began in the Superior Court before Judge Crosby May 29.

All the counts against Mrs. Stuart were dropped by Assistant District Attorney Lavell, except the counts charging her with receiving stolen goods.

TRAIN KILLS WICKLIFFE; WIFE FAINTS IN HOUSE

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Representative Robert Wicklife of Louisiana was instantly killed today by a train at the northern end of the Potomac River railroad bridge. His body was found about 10 o'clock by the Washington police, who are investigating.

A pathetic incident occurred in the House when Representative Estopinal arose to announce the tragic death of Representative Wicklife. Unaware that her husband had been killed, Mrs. Wicklife occupied a seat in the gallery. Before Estopinal obtained recognition, Speaker Clark noticed her presence and dispatched a messenger to her side. On her way to the Speaker's room she was told of her husband's death and fainted. She was then carried into the Speaker's room.

VERDICT OF $1,500 FOR SISTER'S DEATH

FITCHBURG, June 11.—A verdict of $1,500 was awarded Thomas Gibbons of Clinton today for the death of his sister, Mary Gibbons, whose administrator of the estate of his sister sued the Worcester Railway for $15,000. On June 27, 1911, Miss Gibbons, who lived in Worcester, became frightened when a fuse blew out. She was killed by failing to the pavement.

MYSTERY IN DEATH OF BROCKTON WOMAN

BROCKTON, June 11.—Mrs. Gerda C. Sodalbom, forty-six years old, was found unconscious early today on the lawn of her home at No. 22 Lafoye street. She was taken to Brockton Emergency Hospital, where she died several hours later. No cause for her death has as yet been given out by the doctors.

TWO SIDES OF THE STRIKE; ORGANIZER FAY'S AND ROAD'S

ORGANIZER FAY says: There are a considerable number less cars in operation than on Friday last, the first day of the strike. Large crowds of patrons, from 300 to 500, were standing around waiting for cars in many places, showing a demoralization of the service.

THE ELEVATED says: From early morning until dark we have run all our lines. We are much gratified with the service we have rendered. We are prepared to continue to render a safe and good service under the protection which we have been assured will be given us.

LABOR BOARD BILL IS SIGNED

Governor Foss today signed the bill establishing a State Board of Labor and Industries, to have supervision over all industrial establishments of the State. The bill was advocated by the Governor in his inaugural message and is one of the most important labor measures before this year's Legislature.

Sweeping powers are given to the new board, which is to consist of five members to be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Council. One member of the board shall be an employer of labor, one a wage-earner, one a physician or sanitary engineer and at least one a woman. The board is given authority to appoint a commissioner of labor at an annual salary of $5,000 to $7,500, who shall devote all his time to the affairs of the board under its direction. The chairman of the board will receive $1,500 a year and the other members $1,000 each.

Governor Foss, in a statement issued on the bill, criticises the Republicans of the Legislature for incorporating a provision in the bill by which the law will not become operative until next year. This was done so that Governor Foss would not make the appointments provided for in the measure.

J. P. MORGAN COMING BACK TO AMERICA

NEWPORT, June 11.—Commodore J. Pierpont Morgan has cabled to his steward to open Grave Point Fishing Club by Saturday. This means the commodore is intending to return to this country and wishes the place open so his friends can make use of it.

JUDGE PRAISES SOUTH BOSTON

Judge Fallon of the South Boston Court today paid a tribute to the residents of that section of the city for the moderation they have exercised during the past few days of the "L" strike.

"It would not be proper," said Judge Fallon, "for me to discuss the particular merits of the controversy, for I am here as a judge of the court to award justice to corporation and individual in any case growing out of this trouble.

"I am pleased, however, at the manner in which the people of South Boston have conducted themselves so far. South Boston has been one of the most orderly sections of the city since the strike began. Most of the offenders brought to my court since the trouble started came from other sections of the city. They never have been residents of South Boston. If these peaceable conditions continue, they will serve as a lesson to those outside South Boston who have believed in the past that this is a dangerous place in which to live.

ARBUCKLE'S SISTER TO CONTROL ESTATE

NEW YORK, June 11.—By a decision of Surrogate Ketcham in Brooklyn today, Miss Christina Arbuckle, at seventy-two years of age, becomes the directing head of a $37,500,000 estate. Miss Arbuckle won her fight for the control of the estate of the late John Arbuckle, who was her brother. Letters of administration were issued to Miss Arbuckle as administratrix of the estate.

GALVESTON TIDAL WAVE RUMOR DENIED

NEW YORK, June 11.—Rumors were circulated on the Cotton Exchange at noon that there had been a disastrous tidal wave at Galveston, Tex. At the Western Union office at 12:28 o'clock it was stated that the wires were then working into Galveston and that reports of a tidal wave there were untrue.

TELLS LOSS OF CASH IN STRAUSNIDER TRIAL

Samuel Butters, the Atlantic avenue junk dealer who is now on the stand in the Suffolk Criminal Court testifying against "Big Leo" Strausnider, told the court and jury today that he wouldn't bet on a race horse if he could make $100,000 a minute. Strausnider is on trial before Judge Chase and jury, charged with conspiracy in connection with the larceny of $7,500 from Butters on July 18, 1911.

Butters told the court that he was led to believe that he could get a big bargain in copper if he would go to Providence. He was then introduced to Strausnider, he said, who posed as an official of the Western Union Telegraph Company.

Butters told about drawing $7,500 from the bank and going to Providence on July 18. Upon his arrival he was taken to a house numbered 47 Snow street and "ushered into a dark room," "Crane, a man named Kane, James Jones and Strausnider were in there," said the witness.

Somebody Got Cash.

"Jones grabbed my left wrist. I had become frightened and drew my knife, but the next thing I knew somebody took my money. My money—six one thousand dollar bills and three five hundred dollar bills—was in my trousers pocket."

"What did Strausnider do?" asked Attorney William H. Scharton on cross-examination. "He did nothing," replied the witness.

Q.—Was he in the room? A.—He was like an electric light. He would flash into the room and then out again. But he was fast on his feet.

Q.—What did you do when they grabbed your money? A.—I hollered so loud that everybody heard me.

Q.—And Jones was arrested? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you ever gamble? A.—Oh, no, I never gamble.

Q.—Do you ever place a bet on a horse? A.—No.

Plays Pinochle.

Q.—Would you bet on a horse if you could make $1,000 a minute? A.—Certainly not.

Q.—Would you take a bet if you could make a $100,000 a minute? A.—I never bet.

The witness said he never played poker, checkers or pitch, but admitted that he played pinochle.

Butters was then asked concerning his testimony in the police court at Providence, during the trial of Jones, who was charged with the larceny of $7,500. He said his memory was a little faulty on several minor statements.

"But you will never forget your $7,500?" asked Attorney Scharton.

"I will never forget that," he answered.

Butters also testified that he feared he might lose the $7,500 that he carried to Providence on the second trip. Before going there with the money he had his bookkeeper fasten the money in his inside waistcoat pocket with a safety pin.

Butters added that he was informed by one of the men, in the party he met, that they were in touch with an operator for the Western Union Company who relayed the results of horse races to a pool room and that they got the results first.

Two slips were shown to Butters, with the name of a horse, "Barnum $500 to win," and signed "H. Hall." Butters denied placing the amount on the slips, but stated that he thought the name was in his handwriting.

Q.—Why did you allow the name H. Hall to be placed on the hotel register, Mr. Butters? A.—I didn't know what name they put there. If I had known what they were doing, they wouldn't get my $7,500 either.

Wife 'Shadowed' Chauffeur Lidstone Suing Rich Mrs. Meyers for $25,000

LIDSTONE AND MRS. MEYERS, AS SHOWN IN PICTURES INTRODUCED AT TRIAL

In Norfolk Court Tells of Love Notes in Action Against Brookline Woman

Francis R. Hall, a Boston detective, testified in the Norfolk Superior Court at Dedham, today, that on the evening of December 2, 1910, he looked through a window of Mrs. Blune Woodbury Meyers' home at Wellesley Farms and saw Mrs. Meyers put her arms around the neck of George W. Lidstone, her chauffeur. Mrs. Meers' hair was unbound and was hanging down her back according to Hall.

Hall is a witness for Mrs. Annie Chase Lidstone of Brookline, who is suing Mrs. Meyers for $25,000 for alleged alienation of Lidstone's affections. He testified at the opening session of the trial yesterday and, under cross examination today, swore to the above circumstances.

Mrs. Helen Legacy of Brookline, a friend of Mrs. Lidstone, described an all-night watch she and Mrs. Lidstone, with Mrs. Legacy's brother and a man named Powell, kept on the Meyers home on November 27, 1910.

Kept All-Night Watch.

Mrs. Legacy testified that she saw Lidstone and Mrs. Meyers in the Meyers house through the window, that they watched all night and that Lidstone came out of the house and went away in the morning.

Mrs. Mary E. Delano of Brookline, former landlady for the Lidstones, said she once heard Lidstone tell his wife to get a divorce. She also testified that, when Lidstone was ill, Mrs. Meyers kept telephoning as to his condition, calling up four times in one day.

Mrs. Meyers sat in the bar enclosure again today with her counsel and her husband, Hiram B. Meyers. She was more composed today and did not weep once. Mrs. Lidstone, having given her story the opening day, sat outside the rail. Her husband, as before, had a seat in the rear of the court room.

Mrs. Meyers, a member of the Wellesley society set, mother of two girls and enjoying the many luxuries which her husband's large income obtains for her, is accused by Young Mrs. Lidstone of writing letters to her chauffeur, beginning "My own sweetheart" and signed "Your own girl."

Mrs. Lidstone says on the witness stand that she "shadowed" Lidstone from Brookline to Wellesley, leading him to the Meyers home.

She swears she saw Mrs. Meyers sitting in Lidstone's lap, kissing the chauffeur frequently.

These things Mrs. Lidstone saw, she declared, through a window.

Overheard Conversation.

The chauffeur's wife also asserts that she overheard her husband and Mrs. Meyers talking at one time and that, in speaking of Mr. Meyers, Mrs. Meyers said: "He's a big dub, anway. I can josh him all right."

In the Spring of 1910 Hiram B. Meyers of Wellesley Farms bought an automobile and George W. Lidstone secured the job of running it. The Lidstones had a little flat in Brookline. Lidstone took a room in Wellesley to be near his work. According to Mrs. Lidstone's story on the opening day of the trial she began at that time to notice a change in her husband's feelings toward her.

He used to write fess frequently, but later wrote less often.

On her return visit to New Hampshire she saw her husband Sept. 8, 1910, at Brookline. She saw him again Sept. 12, 1910. He showed her two letters from Mrs. Meyers. They were addressed to his room in Crescent street, Wellesley.

"Your Own Girl."

One was headed, "My Own Sweetheart," and signed "Your Own Girl."

Her husband would not let her take the letters, but admitted they were from Mrs. Meyers. She knew Mrs. Meyers' handwriting and the letters were in her handwriting.

On September 28, 1910, her husband came to the house in Brookline. He told her he had been indiscreet, she testified, and that he wanted a divorce.

Mrs. Meyers was in the car outside waiting for him.

She next saw him October 2, 1910. He remained an hour or so. "He said: "I want a divorce. I want to be free. I don't care for you."

On October 11, 1910, her husband was discharged.

October 30, 1910, he came back to Brookline and said he was going to live with her. He remained until December 12 1910.

She described "shadowing" her husband from Brookline to Wellesley and locating him at the Meyers' home.

Saw Mrs. Meyers sit in her husband's lap. Saw Mrs. Meyers hug and kiss her husband a great many times. She made her observations through a window.

TOLEDO, O., May 10, 1912—"I have completely cured my eczema. I suffered with it ever since I was a boy, and I am now 47 years old. My arms and face would break out, and I was tortured with itching, especially in the spring, fall and winter. On my cheeks my skin would turn red, itch and crack, and more so on my wrists. They would split open and bleed.

"I was in a hospital one day to see a friend who had skin disease, and I found they had cured him with Resinol Ointment, and Dr. ——, one of the best in Chicago, recommended it for my eczema. I used it with Resinol Soap, and to my surprise they have completely cured me. My skin is clear." (Signed) CHAS. J. STORRIE, 710 National Union Building.

Scalp a solid scab for 18 months.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 6, 1912—"Our little girl Ruth was afflicted with an eruptive, scaling, crusting skin trouble, especially the scalp, which was a solid eruptive scab, and continued so for eighteen months.

"Nothing we could find would relieve her suffering and embarrassing unsightliness until we tried Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. In this began to relieve at once, and under a few weeks' treatment healed all the sores." (Signed) MRS. NANNIE L. TERRY, 148 Heckman Street.

FAVOR CORBETT BUILDING LAW

The Boston Real Estate Exchange today approved of the proposed new ordinance drafted by Corporation Counsel Cogell providing for increased protection against faulty and illegally constructed buildings and the registration and licensing of builders and contractors.

The committee of the exchange which considered the matter consisted of Samuel M. Child, Neil McNeil, Edward H. Eldredge and Frederic H. Vinal. They recommend some slight amendments to the proposed ordinance, the principal one being that the examining board authorized to issue licenses to contractors and builders consist of five members, instead of three as in the original draft.

The board, in the opinion of the Exchange, should be the building commissioner, two general building contractors, one an architect and one a civil engineer.

REPORT ON HANFORD INQUIRY TOMORROW

Representative Borger, the Wisconsin socialist, and Representative Norris of Nebraska, presented impeachment charges to the committee.

ASK ALL ELKS TO SEEK CARTER

MARLBORO, June 11.—Lodges of Elks all over the country will be asked to assist in the search for Henry H. Carter, a member of Marlboro Lodge of Elks, who has disappeared from his home. It is the belief that he may show up in some other city, his friends have requested lodge members to be on the lookout for him.

No reason can be assigned for Carter's disappearance save that he may be unbalanced temporarily. This is the theory held by his friends. He was married happily and was employed by the Windsor stables here. So far as is known, he was satisfied with his position.

The last seen of Carter was Friday, when he took a car, saying he was going to Boston. As yet there has been no suspicion that he met with foul play. His friends think he may try to secure a position with a livery firm. Information of his whereabouts will be welcomed by his friends in the Lodge of Elks and Marlboro Lodge of Odd Fellows.

Trefry Explains Inheritance Law

Tax Commissioner Trefry today gave out a statement explaining the provisions of the new inheritance law which went into effect May 29. He said in part:

"The new act which in its force upon the estates of all persons dying on or after May 29, 1912, exempts all personality belonging to the estates of non-residents decedents and taxes only real estate situated in Massachusetts. In this respect the new Massachusetts law goes one step further than the recent New York law which still imposes a tax upon tangible property such as * * * goods, wares and merchandise belonging to the estates of non-residents.

"This change in the law will greatly facilitate the transfer of stocks in Massachusetts corporations and other personal property within Massachusetts such as bank deposits, contents of safe-deposit boxes, etc., owned by foreign descendents by the removal of the present liability of the corporation, bank or individual for such taxes allowing the prompt transfer without the intervention of the Tax Commissioner."

FORMER ROXBURY WOMAN, ILL, ENDS LIFE BY SHOOTING

Miss Minnie West, formerly of No. 8 Fountain street, Roxbury, committed suicide by shooting today at the home of her brother, George West of Monponsett street, in the town of Hanson. Miss West had been in poor health for a year. She was thirty-six years old. At 6:30 a. m. George West heard a shot. He found his sister on her bed with a bullet wound in her right temple. She was unconscious and died at 8:20. A 32-calibre revolver was found at the foot of the bed.

PLAN NEW LEADERSHIP FOR ROOSEVELT FORCES

tee promised to take place as a result of the steam roller's work in the Indiana delegate cases.

Indiana Loss a Hard Blow.

The loss of Indiana was a severe blow to him—particularly from a political point of view—and so the fight before the National Committee is to be reorganized. Roosevelt himself was thoroughly displeased when his representative on the committee voted with the Taft men to seat the contested delegates-at-large from the Hoosier State.

The manner of the election of these delegates was one of the things about which the Colonel has had much to say. The primary in Marion County (Indianapolis) he characterized as one of the crookedest in the history of the country. To have the two men turn in the support of the Taft men in this fight was a blow at the underlying principle in the Colonel's campaign. Nolging that has happened since the National Committee went into session and ground out its first day's quota of Taft votes has pleased the Taft leaders so much.

And that is not all. There have been differences among the Roosevelt leaders. They have changed their plans frequently since the fight. Yesterday's moves added new dissensions. Furthermore it has caused dissatisfaction among the contesting delegates who are fighting for representation in the convention. Michigan and Kentucky leaders, who were billed to start in the next caucus with the steam roller, were so angry last night that they threatened not to go into the contests. They asserted frankly that the Roosevelt men, knowing what the real merits in the cases were, must vote with them or they would not make a fight.

Leaders' Action a Surprise.

The action of the floor leaders in committee room in voting against their own contests from the first has created surprise, and, as the Taft men view it, has weakened their case. Harry New, chairman of the sub-committee on arrangements and one of the real leaders on the Taft side, has characterized the contests brought by the Roosevelt men as "trivial," almost from the first. In only a few cases have the colonel's forces voted to support the arguments of the attorneys, although they must have known before they allowed the attorneys to appear what the cases were.

The Roosevelt men know also that the case as presented frequently did not represent the full merits of the contest, especially before a committee that has carelessly shifted its rules three times, admitting and excluding evidence almost at will. The contestants assert that, knowing the merits of the case, the committeemen should either have withdrawn the trivial cases or gone down fighting.

The whole thing has caused consternation in the Roosevelt camp. The fact that the Roosevelt men voted on the Indiana delegates-at-large cases to establish a precedent which the other committeemen must follow when the Washington cases come up was no comfort. It was pointed out that the other committeemen have already reversed themselves frequently, and they will probably do it again. It is this situation that has made it practically certain that Roosevelt will come to Chicago. In fact, he is expected tomorrow in time to direct the fight that will be made in the Michigan cases.

Governor Herbert S. Hadley of Missouri may also be added to the fighting force and there is a strong possibility, according to Roosevelt leaders, that "Boss Bill" Flinn may descend on the national committee armed with a posky and slain something for the twenty anti-Flinn pecemen to finish. In all, it looks today as if the real fight had just started and that a very large bunch of fireworks was about to be touched off.

Dark horse talk was a little stronger today than it has been. Headquarters of Senator Clapp of Minnesota were opened in the Congress Hotel with Colonel E. G. Platt of Chicago in charge.

Roosevelt Conference.

A conference of Roosevelt leaders was held in the rooms of Senator Dixon today. Gifford Pinchot and a number of others talked matters over with the Senator. Pinchot was asked whether he would take any definite steps for smashing the steam roller. He smiled mysteriously and remarked: "If I had any such plans in mind, I certainly would not reveal them in advance."

Governor Johnson of California is speeding eastward, his presence being desired in Chicago not later than next Wednesday, when the California delegation contest will be taken up.

So far as Wisconsin delegates are concerned no support will be given to Roosevelt or Taft by men instructed for La Follette. Efforts also will be made to hold the delegates from North Dakota in line. This was decided at a meeting of the La Follette steering committee last night.

William Barnes, Jr., chairman of the New York Republican State Committee and bitter political enemy of Theodore Roosevelt, arrived in Chicago today. He went into conference at once with the Taft leaders. For an hour he was closeted with Charles Hilles, secretary to President Taft, in Hilles' quarters at the Blackstone Hotel. Barnes is expected to head the hardest fighting forces of the President in the fight for the nomination.

These are strenuous days for our dashing young hero, Colonel Claude. Several times it has looked as if the sun would rise on the beautiful Rosamond a tearful captive. Even now there is a chance he will bite the teeth out of the saw or maybe some good spirit will shut off the power. Who knows? Tomorrow may bring a happier time for the young lovers.

DEMOCRATIC BOOMS ARRIVING AT BALTIMORE

BALTIMORE, Md., June 11.—Though Chairman Mack and Secretary Woodson of the Democratic National committee are not due in Baltimore until tomorrow, the preparations for the conventions were in full swing today. Sergeant-at-Arms Martin and National Committeeman Daniels of North Carolina are in conference over the final details.

The Harmon boosters are already on hand at their headquarters shaping up the details for the fighting, which will actively begin next week.

Speaker Clark will be nominated for the Presidency by United States Senator James A. Reed of Missouri.

Congressman Oscar W. Underwood will be placed in nomination by either Governor O'Neil or Congressman Thomas Heflin of Alabama.

NOTIFY COURT OF SCHOFIELD'S DEATH

United States District Attorney Asa P. French this noon gave formal notice to Judge Dodge, in the United States Court of Appeals, of the death of Judge William Schofield of the Circuit Court. Judge Dodge referred to Judge Schofield's integrity and ability, and said his associates had fervently hoped for his recovery. District Attorney French said a memorial meeting will be held later. Court then adjourned.

NAME TRUSTEES FOR BREWING COMPANY

At the first meeting of the creditors of the Souther Brewing Company today before Receiver Olmstead, in the United States Bankruptcy Court, Joseph Proctor, Jr., Fitzhenry Smith and Walter A. Earl were appointed trustees to look out for the property. They filed a joint bond of $25,000. They had been in charge of the company's affairs since it went into bankruptcy.

FUN AND HUMOR AT CONVENTION

CHICAGO, June 11.—Colonel Harry S. New, when not engaged in piloting the National Committee, gives his serious attention to raising "green garden truck" at his Summer home at Turtle Lake, Ind. Three weeks ago just before he came to Chicago, he "set out" his radishes, string beans, onions and lettuce, intending to let nature take her course while he was away. He was boasting about his garden to an envious gathering in the lobby of the Congress Hotel today when a page handed him a telegram. Colonel New read the message and his face was overspread with anxious expression of woe.

"What's the matter?" inquired one of his auditors, anxiously.

"Temperature at Turtle Lake has dropped to fifteen degrees," answered the Colonel sadly. "Farewell, succulent lettuce; good-bye sweet onions."

Lyon's Jokes Gone.

Colonel Cecil Lyon of Texas is a celebrater raconteur, as well as a warm supporter of Colonel Roosevelt's candidacy. Steeped in sorrow, following the devastating career of the judgment that flattened out the contesting Roosevelt delegates, the Colonel was dejectedly trying to punch a hole in the floor of the Congress lobby with his cane when a friend asked: "Got any new funny ones today, Colonel?"

"Mirth is dead and humor mourns," said the Colonel in hollow tones. "Laughs are all clamped down and I could not lift the lid off one if I tried. Come around next week and I'll resurrect the joke-book."

Some one of the many persons in the United States, who would like to know just what Taft leaders are doing in secret to accomplish the nomination of their candidate nearly succeeded today.

Director McKinley of the Taft campaign had called for a conference of some of the Southern delegates. There was quite a party of them. Just as they were all seated and about to begin discussing their plans, Mr. McKinley took a look around the room. There was one man whom he did not recognize.

"Just a minute," said Mr. McKinley; then he pointed his finger at the stranger: "Who are you?"

"Oh, I beg your pardon," said the stranger, "I thought this was public. I won't stay."

"You are right," said McKinley. "Close the door when you go out."

Senator Crawford a Fan.

"I am a fan," calmly announced Senator Crawford Kennedy of Nebraska today. "No, not baseball, but political conventions. I have attended every convention since 1884 and take it from me, it is life's greatest amusement."

Senator Kennedy is the official story-teller of the "bunch" and makes good every time any one asks for a yarn. He has a look of "that reminds me" up his sleeve to be withdrawn at any convenient moment. He has invented more campaign yells than any one else in existence and can always find time to dig up a new one.

Colonel Sam Parker, the Honolulu near-delegate, was caught today prowling about in one of the millinery shops that tempt feminine promenaders strolling along Peacock alley.

The Colonel was more interested in the saleslades than in the hats on display.

"Hello, Colonel," shouted a friend who discovered the Hawaiian in the shop. "Go on away now," retorted the discovered. "I don't know you now. I'll see you later."

CLARK IN LEAD, DECLARES MACK

NEW YORK, June 11.—"There will be no steam roller at Baltimore. The individual choice of every delegate to the Democratic National Convention will be considered, not only as to candidates for President and Vice-President, but for officers of the convention."

Chairman Norman E. Mack, of the Democratic National Committee, made this statement after issuing a call to the committee on convention arrangements to meet him in Baltimore on June 20 to select a candidate for temporary chairman of the convention that gathers on June 25.

"I have no more idea who is to be temporary chairman than I have who is to be nominated for President," continued Chairman Mack. "Senator O'Gorman and Congressman Sulzer of New York; Senator Ollie James of Kentucky; Senator Kern, of Indiana; Senator Rayner, of Maryland; Congressman Henry, of Texas; James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, and others have been suggested.

"I have no preference. It is up to the committee on arrangements to designate and then up to the convention to say who shall preside.

"What is your prediction as to who will be nominated for President?"

"I have none to make. Nor do I know. Clark is certainly in the lead, so far as the aggregate number of delegates pledged to him is concerned. He has 456 out of the 729 necessary to secure the nomination. Then there is Dr. Wilson with about 366.

"And there are Harmon and Underwood with some more votes, and dark horses like Gaynor, who has a lot of friends, and there may be four or more others. Now, if Clark and Wilson could get together and combine their vote, of course they would control the convention. But whether a combination is forming against one or the other I do not know. Our committee on credentials will have little to do but pass upon the dispute between the Philippine delegates and possibly the Illinois quarrel.

"I predict the most harmonious convention in the history of the party."

No more overwork to fag his clerks!

For Your Fair Skin, "Milady"

There has never been on the market, in our knowledge, any substance that would bleach the skin unless it contained injurious acids or corrosive sublimate. The enforcement of the Pure Food and Drugs Act has made the marketing of these articles illegal.

Therefore, we feel the readers of the American will welcome the news that the Riker-Jaynes Drug Stores, our progressive druggists, have secured the agency for Boston of White's Skynbleach, a peroxide cream, composed mostly of Earth Alkaline Peroxides and which contains no acids or injurious substances of any kind.

It does its work by reason of the fact that when rubbed on the skin previously moistened with warm water, the free and active oxygen which thereby becomes released, not only bleaches the skin, but thoroughly disinfects as well. The person afflicted with discolored skin and wishing to obtain that creamy white skin so much to be desired, will find Skynbleach a most valuable, efficient and simple preparation to use.

For sale at Riker-Jaynes Drug Stores. (Peroxide Products Co., New York City.)

WEEK'S OFFERINGS IN BOSTON PLAYHOUSES

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

This is the season when it is easy to believe everything you see in vaudeville—not that vaudeville improves with a rising temperature, but one's frame of mind is more receptive to the light waisted two-a-day style of entertainment that is found at B. F. Keith's Theatre. It was no wonder yesterday when the merry varieties passed before your eyes—and pleased them.

Even a child should know that novelty is the keynote of vaudeville success. Sam Mann is no child but he, too, knows it, and in "The New Leader" he unfolded something that was dilicious to the senses and, by the same token, deadly to any gloom that might be lurking in your system.

Mr. Mann conducted his audience on a little trip back of the scenes in vaudeville—to a morning rehearsal. It was fine to catch the stage carpenter, the property man and a few near performers out of the regular picture, and Mr. Mann, as the new orchestra leader, was both philosophical and voluble. Nothing was too sacred for him to keep under cover.

If Monday morning rehearsals were exactly as reproduced by Mr. Mann and his excellent company, that would be the particular time when the management should sell seats for the performance—and boost the prices.

Plenty of Fun for All.

Mr. Mann is an intimate comedian. He occupied the orchestra leader's chair yesterday and enjoyed himself with those of the audience who had front seats.

He even borrowed a dollar from one of Mr. Kieth's patrons and sent the property man on an errand with it. He intimated that he was thirsty and that the boy would return with a pocket full of fluid that is popularly supposed to relieve thirst. Of course, he was disappointed—the property boy spent the money on himself.

At another moment, just to get on a friendly basis with his audience, he passed around peppermint lozenges to those in near-by seats. He said they were very good, and inasmuch as no complaints were registered he must be taken at his word.

At any rate Mr. Mann supplied one of the most enthusiastic and timely vaudeville novelties of the year, and if there was anybody in the house who didn't bunch himself into contentment it was not the actor's fault.

Mr. Mann will find himself warmly greeted on his next visit to Keith's.

No Time for Serious Things.

There was nothing to laugh at in the Mirano Brothers' act. It was one of those hair-raisers that keeps vaudeville a step or two ahead of the latest of circus sensations.

A stout Mirano, at the bottom of a long and flimsy pole, carefully balanced another Mirano who flopped around at the top of the pole.

Passing on to things that aroused, you found Charles and Fanny Van working industriously in "A Case of Emergency," another behind-the-scenes feature.

While less finished than Mr. Mann's "The New Leader" it was crowded with laughs, which, after all, was enough to commend it.

For melody, Belle Story supplied your wants in most agreeable style. She had a fetching way of making her songs count, and you hungered for more.

The Benivici Brothers also made music—on violins. They started seriously and ended in ragtime, which appeared to be a sensible solution of the matter. It was no day for serious things.

After two hours with Mr. Keith yesterday it was clear that vaudeville is a perfectly safe and sound June-time tonic.

New Play at Tremont.

The regular Summer season at the Tremont Theatre will begin tonight when "Little Miss Fix-It," with Miss Alice Lloyd as its star, will enter upon a limited engagement.

The piece is a musical play of the usual hot weather variety and it is planned to keep it at the Tremont indefinitely.

Plays That Remain.

"The Climax" began its second week at the Castle Square Theatre yesterday. It is proving one of the most successful engagements of the season with Mr. Craig.

The Rainey African hunt pictures continue at the Park Theatre. They are popular with children.

A new week was begun yesterday by the Dunbar in Kinemacolor at Tremont Temple. These are moving pictures in colors.

Paragon Park.

Paragon Park is already feeling the rush of Summer business. With the Palm Garden and its cabaret show in full working order, and the numerous other features that make the park popular now open, there is little doubt that new records will be made all along the line this year.

Norumbega Park.

The new vaudeville bill at Norumbega Park yesterday was headed by Russell's Minstrel comedians, a band of musical folk who made everybody happy. Another attractive feature was supplied by Paul Frederick and Mlle. Ventra, who contributed a few new ideas to gymnastics.

Orpheum Theatre.

There was more than the usual amount of fun in the bill at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday. The head line act was called "Kid Houlet," and was placed by J. Arthur Hall and company. It was a Roman travesty of birth-making qualities. There were a dozen other vaudeville features and a new list of motion pictures.

Hub Theatre.

Davis and Merrill headed the new bill at the Hub Theatre yesterday and proved themselves fit for the position. There were other features, including new pictures.

Scenic Temple.

Besides the new vaudeville numbers and a long list of motion pictures Leuna Howe's Ladies' orchestra contributed a concert program at the Scenic Temple yesterday.

Bass Point.

With the hotels in full working order and the many other attractions in operation, the season at Bass Point promises to hold its own against any of those that have gone before.

King Philip Trips.

The steamer King Philip is making daily trips to the fishing grounds. Fishing tackle is furnished free and a chowder dinner is served to passengers.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

"The Merry Maidens," a burlesque company, furnished the fun at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday.

Globe Theatre.

This week's program at the Globe pleased big houses all day yesterday. Among the vaudeville features were the McDonald Triplets, in an exciting and novel wheel act; Woodford's posing dog, "Queen"; Murphy and Francis, a lively pair of colored entertainers, and Stanley and May, in a bright singing and talking turn. The Reel, the song review and the newest Biograph story added to the joy of the entertainment.

BESSIE ANDERSON OF ROXBURY, NEW PRINCESS RIVAL

GRAND WELCOME FOR JOHN CRAIG AND COMPANY AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, June 11.—A cordial welcome was given John Craig and his company at Powers' theatre. It was the first performance here of Florence Lincoln's famous Harvard prize play. "The End of the Bridge," and if the applause given is any criterion, it is apparent that it will be received with a continuous favor scarcely second to that which brought it its nine weeks' run at Mr. Craig's Castle Square theatre in Boston. It also is the first time in America that a stock company has gone to another city and given performances at first class prices. This was done at the invitation of the University of Chicago. The acting brought hearty comment for its all round excellence, and Mr. Craig as Dr. Garrod, Mary Young as John Mannering, George Hassell as Felix Marriott and Henrietta McDaniel as Peter were especially well received.

There was a distinguished audience present, including representatives of the University of Chicago and of the local Harvard club.

At the close of the performance Mr. Craig expressed himself as highly gratified at the welcome.

START NOW! WHO IS PRINCESS?

By THE PRINCESS EDITOR.

"To the victors belong the spoils."

This old political maxim is just as true in the Princess Contest as it is in any presidential or other election.

Victory in anything comes only to those who exert their best efforts for success.

Are you, Princess candidates, doing your very best in your vote-getting campaign?

Have you left anything undone?

How many friends can you think of that you have not even asked to save votes for you?

Have you exhausted every resource for the increase of your weekly vote income?

Three Hundred Prizes.

Fortune is offering you her gifts, Princess candidates. It is so easy to take advantage of her generosity.

Three hundred magnificent prizes will be awarded in a few short weeks to 300 of New England's favorite daughters.

A little extra effort and energy put forth NOW may mean the free and unrestricted gift of a Princess Outfit.

It may earn for you the right to get into any store in Boston and select any gown your fancy may desire.

And this is not all! The first prize winner, in addition to the gown may select any hat, and shoes and lingerie, any opera cloak, etc., etc.—and all of this at the expense of the AMERICAN.

And for those who may not win the Princess Outfit a glance at the prize list will show a list of delightful vacation trips on beautiful ocean-going steamers. These trips will solve vacation problems for the winning candidates.

The time is growing short. The leaders today may be the tail-ender tomorrow and the tail-enders today may be the leaders tomorrow.

Today Miss Bessie Anderson of No. 1 Reed terrace, Roxbury, was put forward by her friends as a candidate and received many votes.

The Way to Win.

Success means activity—constant activity—from now until July 6.

The opportunity is here. Be ambitious! Don't delay another moment, but collect and send in the all-important votes.

Another list of candidates' standing which their vote total will appear in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

There will also be a page of candidates' photographs.

Only votes received up to next Friday, June 14, at 11 a. m., will be counted for next Sunday.

NEW RABBI ELECTED.

Congregation Ohel Jacob of East Boston has elected a new rabbi, Joshua David Ursman of Perth Amboy, N. J.

Suffragettes Hand Ultimatum to G. O. P.

Must Adopt a Suffrage Plank or Lose States in Which the Women Vote.

CHICAGO, June 11.—The suffragettes have delivered an ultimatum to the Republican party—support of the cause of women or fight.

"And we are now in a position to put up a real battle," declared Mrs. Katherine Waugh McCulloch today. "Unless the Republican convention adopts a suffrage plank we will try to wipe the six suffrage States out of the Republican column. In those States where women are permitted to vote we are strong enough to throw our support wherever we please. Several of our leaders have already arranged conferences with Republican chiefs. Miss Jane Addams will take up the question before the platform committee, and she is likely to get results of some sort.

"Of course suffragettes are affiliated with all parties, but as the right of women to vote at present is the paramount issue, we will undoubtedly concentrate all our strength in the party which recognizes us."

TRY MRS. ENGLISH IN BANKRUPTCY CASE

Mrs. Ellen M. English, mother of eight small children and a former variety store keeper in South Boston, was placed on trial today before Judge Dodge of the United States Court on the charge of concealing bankruptcy assets. An additional charge of perjury has been placed against her. The government alleges that upon going into bankruptcy she concealed assets of $2,800 that should have been scheduled.

ITALIAN FLEET WILL TAKE LEMNOS ISLE

ROME, June 11.—The Italian war fleet in the Aegean Sea is getting ready to occupy Lemnos, one of the biggest and most important islands in the archipelago, according to dispatches from the Italian commander received today. The Turkish garrison capitulated upon the arrival of the Italian fleet, the messages added. Lemnos has about half way between Mt. Athos and the coast of Asia Minor, and its area is about 175 square miles. The population of the island is about 40,000.

BANKS TO REMAIN OPEN ON JUNE 17

Monday, June 17, will not be a bank holiday in this city. The banks and the clearing house will be open for business as usual.

MARJORIE IDE BRIDE TODAY

Two European sovereigns and the President of the United States are among those who have sent gifts to Miss Marjorie Ide, daughter of Henry C. Ide, American Minister to Spain, who today became the bride of Shane Leslie, son of Colonel and Mrs. John Leslie, and grandson of Sir John and Lady Constance Leslie of Castle Leslie, Glaslough, Ireland, and of the late Leonard Jerome of this city.

King Alfonso and Queen Victoria of Spain have each sent their autographed photographs and an old Spanish fan from the royal museum.

The President and Mrs. Taft sent a large silver basket, and Miss Helen Taft a silver tea caddy.

The ceremony took place at the country home of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. W. Burke Cockran, "The Cedars," at Port Washington, L. I.

The bride's only attendant was her sister. The best man was the bridegroom's brother, William Seymour Leslie. Representative Nicholas Longworth, Frank Gray Griswold, J. Norman dell, Ward, house and Peter F. Dunne were the ushers.

Father Carroll, rector of the Roman Catholic Church at Port Washington, performed the ceremony.

Mr. Leslie is the son of Colonel and Mrs. John Leslie, and grandson on one side of Sir John and Lady Constance Leslie of Castle Leslie, Glaslough, Ireland. The wedding was the culmination of one of the most pleasing romances on record. Miss Ide wins a castle with her husband, for he inherits the Castle Leslie from his grandfather, Sir John Leslie.

GREAT WELCOME TO MARY SANDERS IN RETURN TO MAJESTIC

If the rounds of applause which greeted the return of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" at the Majestic Theatre last night counts for anything, it seems as though that old delightful play has not lost any of its popularity among the Boston theatregoers.

From the rise of the curtain until the final act there was not an idle moment. The play was presented by the full strength of the Lindsay Morison Stock Company.

The reappearance of Mary Sanders as Lovey Mary was well received. During the final act she was called out no less than five times, and finally the audience pleaded with her for a speech, in which she said: "I do not know how to start to thank you all for this one grand reception. I must say that I did not think you all had thought of me so much. I am very thankful to every one of you."

While the acting of Miss Sanders was excellent, Edna Oliver as Mis' Hazy deserves no little credit for her fine work. Every word and every move she made drew a hearty laugh.

Rose Morison as Mrs. Wiggs was a very pleasing character. Besides being an expert in matchmaking, she did her part as a peacemaker also.

The ever interfering Mrs. Eichon was cleverly acted by Mrs. George A. Hibbard, while Alice Hazen did excellent work in taking off the one fat lady, Mrs. Schultz, who oiled on every word with Mrs. Eichon.

Howell Hansell, as the red-headed Mr. Stubbins, who never knew what trouble was, was also very entertaining and was applauded numberless times for his fine work.

2,000 Children on Auto Trip; Joy Day for Cripples

400 Machines Carry Little Ones for Annual Outing at Sharon Lake.

More than 2,000 blind, crippled, destitute and orphaned children from Boston charitable institutions enjoyed their annual outing today at Sharon Lake, after parading through Boston streets in 400 automobiles. The picnic was under the auspices of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association, and the autos were those volunteered by hundreds of kind-hearted Boston people.

Joyous and merry the children were assembled at Park square. There they found a band and all of them joined in the outbursts of cheering. The autos filed out along Boylston street to Tremont, to Park, to Beacon and out through the Back Bay Fens.

At Sharon one of the features was a dandy Punch and Judy show. Sports of all kinds were on the program and prizes from Boston merchants were awarded to the winners in the athletic events. One of the side features was the event for the chauffeurs, to whom thirty prizes were given for athletic prowess.

Dr. Deming of Boston and Chester I. Campbell, the business secretary of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association, had direct supervision over the youngsters and saw to it that nothing was lacking to make the day a red letter event in the lives of the little ones.

The institutions from which the children were taken were the Perkins Institution for the Blind, the Kindergarten for the Blind, Emanuel House, New England Home for Little Wanderers, Jewish Home, Margaret Fuller Home, Sunnyside Day Nursery, Ruggles Street Neighborhood House, Gwynne Temporary Home, Ruggles Street Church, South End Day Nursery, Salvation Army Palace, St. Mark's Church, Morgan Chapel and the Cottage Street Neighborhood House.

The autos and those who contributed them today for the use of the children follow:

RILEY'S COLUMN

THE Red Sox from Boston are today in first place in the American League. They are there by virtue of a percentage of .005 points—otherwise 5-1,000 margin of games won and lost over the White Sox of Chicago. Enough is enough. Even if we never win a pennant we're at the top for a day. As Hugh Bradley sang when he made his famous home run, "It's great to Be a Hero, if Only for a Day."

* * *

THIS is the way it is figured.

| | Won. | Lost. | Per Cent. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Boston Red Sox | 30 | 18 | .625 |
| Chicago White Sox | 31 | 19 | .620 |

IT'S one good bet that Jimmie McAleer and Jake Stahl are sore today because the Senators from Washington won so many games in the first two series that, notwithstanding the good finish in Boston, the Senators now hold the Red Sox 8 to 5. Also that the "Naps," who played the human welsh carrebits in Boston, turned around and bit a huge chunk out of the Red Sox in Cleveland. But Jimmie and Jake will have to think those same Senators for taking four straight from Jimmie Callahan in Comiskey's own back yard, and while they perch on the top rung, they'll have to remember that the same Senators are in third place and coming like a whirlwind.

THE Red Sox have played inconsistent baseball, while the White Sox were going along, day after day, like a band of wild men. When the crash came they went to pieces like a toy pinwheel—faster you go the harder it is to piece you together again. Many a same baseball expert will say that Jimmy Callahan has his machine too fast—that he has his machine too fast—that he has imitated modern business. The difference, they say, is that when you drive your ball players too fast you can't get two ones to take their places and keep up the speed, while in business you needn't mind the fellows you dropped by the wayside—there are enough young ones always ready to pick up the pace.

IT is likely true that the White Sox traveled faster than the pace they were capable of holding. It is also true that they are so good that they will come back now and then, and maybe they'll win the pennant in the end. It is true, too, that while the Red Sox have played in consistent baseball, Boston has had one of the best bunches of ball players, individually, ever collected, but no manager has ever been able to complete the team up to the standard, all around, of such players as Speaker, Hooper and Gardner, or has ever been able to make the team run along like a well-oiled, well directed machine.

* * *

BUT, they're in first place today, and the up to the "Three o'Hooper up!" as the scorers dictate every day when Boston comes to bat in the first inning.

* * *

THE Athletics are still the most formidable team in the American League, while Callahan, Jake Stahl and Clarke Griffith will all tell you that the only one they fear is Connie Mack, notwithstanding all three of them look their teams ahead of Mack's men, and in spite of the fact that Connie's old reliable pitching staff has now reached the long anticipated breaking point.

* * *

THE Red Sox squeezed into first place by virtue of beating the St. Louis Browns, 3 to 2, yesterday, our old friend, "Buck" O'Brien—still coming and getting a little better all the time—being the hero. At the same time, Callahan's speed boys clung to their losing streak—begun when Jimmy was removed from the game by an indomitable umpire two weeks ago—and were beaten, 5 to 1, by the humble Yankees from New York.

* * *

THE Sox from Boston still have Charlie Hall, who will probably pitch to-day—unless Stahl challenges fate by trying Eddie Cicotte—and Joe Wood, who is likely to officiate tomorrow, and when Wood faces the Browns it is not only usually a Red Sox victory, but something akin to a no-hit game on the other side.

* * *

YOU can't expect the Yankees to go on and win more games from the White Sox, but you can expect the Red Sox—if they are a real champion team—to win today and tomorrow from St. Louis. In which case, they will roll into Chicago Thursday still in the lead, and then look out for some fun.

* * *

INCIDENTALLY, it is interesting to relate that Joseph Ward's Pilgrims smashed their losing streak yesterday and plastered the Cardinals with a long deserved defeat. Cheating did it—good, hard, savage cheating—and the pitching of Otto Hess.

* * *

* * *

IN those two innings, McDonald went to first on balls three times—which is probably a big league record—Campbell hit safely twice; Bill Sweeney hit a single, a double and a sacrifice; "Doc" Miller doubled, tripled and fanned; Houser put a home run into Columbus avenue; Johnnie Kling doubled twice and Hess, himself, singled twice. Five runs were scored in the fifth and sixth in the seventh.

* * *

ALL of those hits were savage ones, which nobody would have tried to tackle, except the ones delivered from Campbell's bat. The "St. Louis cannonball" seems at last to be coming into his own hitting record, and it's chiefly because he now places his clouts, like Bill Sweeney does. Bill is as clever and as scientific a hitter as there is in the big leagues, and Campbell is following his style now, with great success. With his sprinting ability Campbell is the most valuable man on the team when he tries to place his hits. And Sweeney is some sprinter, too.

OTTO HESS, who is in form now that the weather is warm, held the Cardinals to six hits, all scattered except in the sixth when, after his own team had scored five runs in a row, Otto let down.

* * *

RED SOX HAPPY IN FIRST PLACE

ST. LOUIS, June 11.—A happy set of athletes were the Boston Red Sox today after their thrilling victory over the Browns sent them into first place in the American League race. Manager Stahl called a meeting in his room, and when he had the entire squad together, he shook each by the hand and congratulated them on their great work so far this season.

"This is the happiest day of the year for me, boys," said the manager as he addressed the throng. "I'm not the one who deserves the credit, but you are. Your playing has brought us to the top and I know that you're playing is going to keep us there.

"When I gave up baseball I had no intention of ever getting back in the game, but at my home in Chicago I often pressed the desire to be the manager of a pennant winner. And boys I believe we are the pennant winner. The successful ball club is the one that has no Pitfalls in its ranks and where all the boys pull together. And I am happy to state that such are the conditions with us.

Not a One-Man Team.

"Many other teams are referred to as a one-man team, but we are not a one-man team. We are a team of one. Every man on the team has hustled for me and since the day we started training I don't think a harsh word has been exchanged between any two players. Naturally one becomes excited on the diamond, but it is his anxiety to win and help the team that brings about any little arguments." Then Stahl spoke a few words and excused the boys, patting each on the back as they left his room.

To the correspondent of the AMERICAN Stahl said: "Constantly fighting the other fellow and confidence from the very start, have brought us to the lead. The team is never beaten until the finish and we have won many games by such manoeuvres. Today all the boys are in perfect condition and I am positive that we will keep up the fight.

"However, I will not predict the pennant for us. We will keep on fighting and we will keep on hustling, with the pennant our object. We have played all the teams and so far. None of them have outclassed us. The pitchers have done noble work, the fielders have helped out in every game and the batters have done their share in the pinch. When you have a team playing this kind of ball for you, you are certain to win.

"I am happy to say that I am managing a team for Boston. The fans there deserve a winner and they have given us the best of treatment and support."

Wood Will "Pitch His Head Off."

Joe Wood offered the following:

"They'll have to travel their fastest to bush us down from now on. I never felt better in my entire career and my arm was never stronger. I know it will hold out to the last and whenever Manager Stahl calls upon me I'm ready to work. And I will get better as the season advances, too."

"Buck" O'Brien is the one who twirled the Red Sox to the lead. "When I saw the score on the big board in left field showing that the White Sox were beaten, I told Manager Stahl that I would win out. I believe I used more curves, more speed in the last two innings to stop the Browns than in any full game I ever pitched. In the ninth inning, after we scored the run that put us ahead, I fed the batters on nothing but the wide ones, never putting the ball across the plate, but working the corners continually."

"You have to put me in, too," stated Second Sacker Yerkes. "I scored the winning run and I only wish that I could score the winning tally every day."

Another Shift Made in Eli Varsity Crew

GALES FERRY, Ct., June 11.—Yale's varsity crew is still in an unsettled condition. Another shift was made in the boat yesterday and Bagbee has been relegated to the four oar.

The rowing order now is as follows: Stroke, Snowden; 7, Allen; 6, Philbin; 5, Rominger; 4, Denman; 3, Stevenson; 2, Freeman; bow, Gore; coxswain, Barnum.

The varsity and freshman crews rowed down to the 3½-mile flag in short stretches yesterday.

Coach Cook started the oarsmen up stream at a 28-gait and the boats were making good time with the southwest breeze helping the boat along. Both Yale's eights are rowing in fair form, especially the varsity crew.

Betting on the big race is about ten to nine on the big crews, in favor of Harvard.

PILGRIMS CLASH WITH CARDINALS

The Pilgrims and St. Louis Cardinals will clash in the second game of their series at the Walpole street grounds and the men led by Johnny Kling are out to make it four straight victories over the Mound City crew.

After a run of ten straight defeats, the Pilgrims pulled themselves together yesterday long enough to pull out a victory over Rajah Bresnahan's Cardinals. The lost batting eyes were recovered and the greased gloves were discarded by Kling's squad, with the result that they romped home with an easy decision.

Now that they have pulled out of the rut of defeats, the Pilgrims are determined to keep going in the right direction and are bent on adding another victory to their string today.

The Pilgrims scored all their runs yesterday in two innings. In the fifth they threw the harpoon into the visitors' slim twirler for five healthy runs. Then in the seventh, they got their bats busy again and sent six more runs chasing across the pan.

Managers Great Aid to Players

Tigers Owe Success to Jennings

WHEN Hugh Jennings coaches for the Detroit team he injects an oddity into the mannerism which he uses that attracts the spectator and enlivens the crowd. He is full of queer fun.

When McGraw coaches he barely utters a word above ordinary street conversation. Now and then he shouts a little when a pitcher seems likely to have arrived at the limit of good control, but the New York manager's method of handling a team has changed almost completely in the last two years.

If he continues he will begin to be known as the "silent man of baseball."

Bresnahan, naturally a good ball player, who absorbed a great part of that which has been valuable to him as a manager when he was a player under McGraw, is a fiery and impetuous leader.

With a naturally clear voice, which is resonant and carries far, he directs his players with sharp and clear commands, which are audible in any part of the field. Furthermore, he occasionally converses with the umpire with equal directness of speech.

Jennings pleads with his players, in spite of the fact that there is a great deal of direct command conceived within the plea. Not so with Bresnahan. He tells what he wants and speaks his mind quickly and as much to the point as possible.

It is Bresnahan's idea that he has a team of young men with him, none of whom is likely to go back, and all of whom he thinks will improve. Meanwhile if there are better ball players who offer he will not be averse to signing them, although he contends with much justification that he has done fairly well with his young blood as it is.

The pitchers of the St. Louis team are by no means the most wonderful in the world," said Bresnahan. "Sometimes they would try the patience of Job, yet they are all promising, and I am willing to work with them so long as they are willing to work with me and I can see improvement in them. No man can build up a baseball club in a minute. When I took hold of the St. Louis Club there was not as much good material in it as there was in other clubs in the National League, yet I have managed to keep along and play better ball with my youngsters than some of them have been able to play with their veterans.

"By the time that one or two of these clubs begins to see a little the Cardinals will be better than they are today. I'll get the combination yet which will fit exactly with some of the men who are now members of the Cardinals."

REPORTS from the West say the Athletics are fighting and making more noise than they have displayed in previous years. Reason: 'Cause the Mackmen are occupying a second division berth, and the players don't feel as comfortable there as when showing the way in the American League race.

The White Elephants are fighting for games. They are "crabbing" with the umpires and want every close decision. That's an indication that the team isn't going smoothly, as in previous years the Mackmen were as tame as sick kittens, so far as fighting the umps was concerned.

PERHAPS the most noticeable feature of the baseball tactics this year is the tendency to hit at the first ball pitched. Ordinarily that is considered a boob trick, and managers suspend bright young men who try it; but this season a change has come over the spirit of their dreams.

While the "don't hit the first ball pitched" idea has been rampant among regular baseballists for a long time, by observers have been prone to question its wisdom. Their doubts were sustained last year at the world's series, when only seven out of ten of the men who went to the plate tried to hit the first ball, knowing that the orthodox rule was for the pitcher to slam it straight over the plate and get one on the batter. That policy proved surprisingly successful for both teams and is being followed this year, with the result that another tradition of baseball has been upset.

The idea is not hitting at the first ball is to try out the twirler and make him work as much as possible, but when a pitcher is going good and shows no signs of exploding, it has always struck many fans as a fool scheme to let him get a strike on the batter and thereby lose a chance to take a swing at an easy proposition. This seems to have gotten through the heads of the managers, and the opposite policy is being given a thorough trial, with highly satisfactory results.

American Olympic Team Best in History of Game

World's Record Holders Will Defend Old Glory

New England Will Be Well Represented Among the Athletes at Sweden.

NEW YORK, June 11.—The American Olympic committee, which picked the team to represent the stars and stripes in the International Olympic games at Stockholm next month, today began making the final preparation for sending the men abroad. The team, 150 strong, accompanied by trainers, Olympic representatives and others will sail from New York for Sweden, Friday, on the Finland.

The pick of American athletes make up the team which is expected to sweep the boards for this country in the international games. Five times in the past America has won the honors, and athletic experts figure that the team that is being sent abroad this year will again pluck the fruits of victory.

James E. Sullivan, of the American Amateur Union, and other athletic experts expressed the belief today that the Americans would not only carry off the bulk of the prizes but would make many new world's records.

The East and West are about evenly represented on the team. Although a number of former Olympic champions have been selected, there is also a great deal of fresh timber. New England has an unusually large representation. The selections:

McGoorty in Town for Gardner Bout

Eddie McGoorty, the Western middle weight star, who is billed to meet Jimmy Gardner at the Pilgrim A. A. Wednesday night, will arrive in town today, accompanied by his manager, Marty Forkins, and his friend, Tommy Walsh.

McGoorty has been training at Hyde Beach, N. Y., where Johnny Kilbane trained for his contest with Jimmy Walsh, and the Oshkosh boxer is in fine condition. He feels certain of defeating Gardner, but knows that the "Pride of Lowell" is hard to beat when he is "right."

On the other hand, Jimmy Gardner feels just as confident that he will check the career of McGoorty. Gardner sprang a surprise when he came back and scored a win over Frank Klaus, the "Pittsburg Beauty," when ninety-nine out of every hundred boxing fans hereabouts thought Klaus a sure winner. In fact, Klaus was a 2 to 1 favorite over Gardner, but the Lowell boy was awarded the decision.

TENNIS RESUMED AT LONGWOOD

Play was resumed this afternoon on the grass courts of the Longwood Cricket Club for the Massachusetts lawn tennis state championship. The matches yesterday showed many of the individual players in the State at the top of their games, and the tussle for first honors this year will bring out some of the best matches in the history of lawn tennis in the Bay State.

One match this afternoon that was watched with great interest was between H. L. Foster and A. N. Reggio. Both are experienced players and exceptionally good at singles.

F. H. Harris the former Dartmouth and New England Intercollegiate champion, as well as the New England tennis champion for 1912, has his work cut out for him in his match with A. S. Dabney, while H. C. Johnson, one of the team which won the State doubles championship two weeks ago, is scheduled to play L. H. Martin, and this match is sure to attract a large gallery.

John Reese and H. P. Scott have worked their way through the first two rounds and will meet late this afternoon and C. F. Johnson and F. Goodridge are others slated for the third round today.

The winner of this tourney meets "Nat" Niles, the present title holder, in a challenge match of the best three in five sets, winning seven of the matches to the finals will be the best two in three sets.

Hunting a Husband

NO. 9—THE WIDOW'S CHARMING DRIVE IS MARRED SOMEWHAT BY AN UNPLEASANT AND UNEXPECTED INCIDENT

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

THE afternoon was as perfect as afternoons in late May and early June can be. The world was all the more lovely for the three days of rain against which Beatrice had rebelled. The sunshine was, perhaps, a little warm for those obliged to go afoot, but delightful to the pair seated in the stylish trap behind the sleek, swift trotter. The day had been worth waiting for, thought the widow and widower as they turned into the Fenway.

"Oh, the beautiful, beautiful day!" Beatrice exclaimed impulsively, then bit her lips as she appreciated what a commonplace and unoriginal remark she had uttered.

But Maynard was satisfied with it.

"Yes," he replied, gaily, "it was made for you and me, I think."

The words were uttered lightly enough, but there was something in his voice that brought the color to the woman's face and a throb to her heart. Yet she laughed with affected lightness.

"What an egotistical thing man is," she retorted. "I suppose that each person driving there"—nodding toward the line of motors and fashionable equipages rolling by on their left—"is thinking the same thing."

"Perhaps so, dear lady," Robert remarked with a deprecatory smile," but only one of them is driving with you, and I claim the day as mine by right of the greatest happiness."

Again Beatrice's heart gave that happy leap with which she was becoming familiar, but this time she made no reply.

Maynard was an excellent driver, and his control over the blooded horse was perfect. He was one of the men who can manage a horse and yet pay attention to the companion who sits by him.

Many men have a way of talking so much to the four-footed animal that they have little to say to the biped who happens to be present. This was not the case with Robert, and beyond the fact that he mentioned that the horse he drove had belonged to his wife (an item that Beatrice winced to forget), he seemed to think little about it. But the woman knew that he was always watchful and ready for any chance fright or sudden shying which might startle her. She felt calmed by the rapid driving, yet perfectly safe with the skilled driver, who talked brightly and amusingly as they sped smoothly along.

Spring and a Hint of Summer

Spring was in the air and Summer near. The soft sunlight, the young leaves' tenderly tinted leaves, the merry shouts of children romping on the green turf all proclaimed it, and the flush on Beatrice's cheeks became more frequent and her laugh more ringing under the influence of the day and her companion's presence. Tennyson has attributed certain emotions to the spring in the springtime, but the sentiment is probably quite as delightful to those whose first youth is past and who are anticipating a second honeymoon of life. Beatrice's first honeymoon had never been more attractive than now, when, taking full advantage of the perfect stage setting in which she found herself, she unconsciously, and without knowing that she was fascinating an eligible and attractive man.

It is doubtful if Helen Robbins would have seen any trace of the sometimes discouraged and depressed Beatrice in the blushing, eager girl who managed her conversation with the ease of the born coquette. And Helen would certainly have had difficulty in reconciling the gratified tonging bearing of her dear friend's husband with the hopelessly unreasoned abandon of the dashing gallant driving the horse which had been the property of his dead wife. Yet each of the actors in this little drama of two was conscious of playing a part and the woman noticed with satisfaction the contrast between her escort's deportment upon this occasion and his behavior in the presence of a larger audience.

Beatrice's tailored gown was of white serge, with black collar, cuffs and revers. Her expenses had been heavy of late and she had debated, as she had before Helen Robbins' dinner party, as to whether she could afford to wear her favorite violets. And, as then, she had decided to be governed by inclination, not by economy. She congratulated herself upon her extravagance when she saw Robert look at the flowers, first with admiration, then with an expression combining regret and suspicion.

"Oh," he said, "I should have recollected to send you some violets, but I fear some other fortunate man was more thoughtful than I."

"I Would Always Wear Them"

Beatrice did not relieve his fears by her reply. They are beautiful, aren't they?" she said, touching them with caressing finger tips. "If I were rich, I would wear violets always."

"And if I had the right, I should never allow you to wear any except those I sent you," was the abrupt rejoinder.

"Shall we go out to Riverside for tea?" said Maynard, as they neared the lower end of the park. "The drive will be beautiful, and," in a lower voice, "I love Riverside, for my wife and I used to go there as often that I have sweet recollections connected with the place. Since she left me I have not had the courage to go. But you have been so very kind and understanding that I think the spot would lose its sad memories if I were to go with you."

All the afternoon Beatrice had been hoping to keep past matrimonial relations in the background, and now, when she least expected it, Maynard's dead wife was, she felt, dragged forward again to mar her pleasure. Nevertheless she controlled all signs of resentment and acquiesced in his suggestion with a gentle sympathy which she did not quite feel, allowing him to talk, unobstructed by word from her, of the loneliness of his present life compared with the "good old days" when "she was here." But the widow drew a sigh of relief when their arrival at Riverside put a stop to the reminiscent strain.

The pair waited the length of the veranda and secured a table looking out over the Charles. Beatrice was scarcely seated herself, and Maynard was still in the grasp of the waiter who was helping him divest himself of his light driving coat, when a man rose from a nearby table and, walking up to Maynard, slapped him on the shoulder. The widower turned with a frown that melted into a smile, and shook hands warmly with the intruder, then introduced him to Beatrice as "my very dear friend, Mr. Rossiter." She greeted him with concealed indifference.

Rossiter was large and florid, his face was over-red and his laugh over-loud, and he gesticulated exaggeratedly. After shaking hands vehemently with Beatrice, he muttered something in a low voice to Maynard, who had not yet sat down, and, linking his arm in Robert's, started to draw him away. The widower hesitated for a moment, then, at some more urgent suggestion from Rossiter, he shrugged his shoulders, laughed, and after turning to Beatrice with a word of apology, coupled with something about "taking time, with her permission, for just a minute's chat on a bit of important business," suffered himself to be led away into the adjoining room, leaving Beatrice, somewhat perplexed, gazing alone at the river and the opposite shore.

Oh! Worse Than Wicked

"YOU vile creature!"

As he spoke these cruel words Smithkins gazed sadly at the cat sitting sleekly on the hearthrug, and then still more sadly at the very small pat of butter which the laudably held before him on a plate.

"Yes, Mr. Smithkins," said the stout lady volubly, "that there's all that is left of your pat of butter, my dear, and I'm thankful. When I came into the room to clear away, there was that villain of a cat a-sitting licking his whiskers, and the butter just a-you see it now," and she drew herself up with a jerk, short of breath.

Smithkins again eyed the cat, then the butter, and then the cat again.

"Vile, depraved creature!" he said reproachfully to puss. "Not only do you wickedly steal my butter, but so that I may suspect that dear, good Mrs. Bilkins, you even cut it off with a knife!"

Emblematic

"How I Dance the Tango"

—An Expert Description of the Season's Most Popular Whirl—

By Lillian Lorraine

HAVE you noticed the popularity of the girls and boys at Summer hotels or clubs who can do any kind of a fancy dance?

Years ago anybody who could dance a cake-walk adequately was sure of being a popular seaside success, but this Summer it will be the pair who can dance the Tango or some other new dance who will take the cake of popularity.

The Tango has been much abused, but it is really an artistic Spanish dance which is danced by the most proper and prosing young Spanish girls, and in its original form there is nothing in it to offend the most rigid taste.

(Lillian Lorraine and Joseph Smith.)

A slow, rocking two-step starts the dance.

One of the best things about the Tango is that if you have no one to dance it with you you can dance it alone, making it a little more like a Spanish dance and using castanets. Castanets, by the way, are once more becoming the rogue in drawing rooms even more than on the stage. To use them properly requires a little practice, but can soon be learned, and if one is musical and has a good sense of rhythm the click of the castanets inspires one to the best dancing, and keeps the hands occupied when dancing about alone. This has always been one of the troubles of the amateur fancy dancer, confronted with the terrible position of being alone by herself on the ballroom floor. "What shall I do with my hands?" is her anguished cry.

The Problem Solved

With the castanets that problem is solved. The ordinary arm movements consist of one arm raised above the head, the other crossed in front of the breast. This pose is familiar to anyone who has seen pictures of celebrated Spanish dancers, or dancing as it is done in Spain everywhere.

The special Tango illustrated here, which is the Tango as I dance it, requires the presence of a partner, but all the steps can be performed alone, only they should not be quite as exaggerated if there is no second performer to steady one's balance.

The Tango opens with a very slow two-step; the feet are hardly raised from the ground, and the body is rocked from side to side, bending to the motion of the feet. The dancers place their hands on each other's shoulder, or the girl puts her hands on the man's shoulder, and he places his on either side of her waist.

The success of the Tango depends very much on the ability of the orchestra or pianist to alter the time of the music. Beginning very slowly, then working up to quick time, with a pause, then slow music again, and a very fast and furious finale. After the slow introduction the glide starts in. This is done by sliding with the right foot straight to the side, bringing the hollow of the left foot to the heel of the right, then changing the weight to the left foot.

The slide ought to be as long as possible, with a distinct rocking movement and a deep bending of the knee. The slide is repeated with the other foot after bringing the body up to the normal position. As the music gets faster instead of raising the body, keep the body lowered and the knees bent, slide one foot out, bring it back and slide the other out, always to the side, of course. This is quite difficult and takes a good deal of practice, but it is the main part of the Tango.

How to Slide

In doing these slides without a partner, place the right foot forward, pointing it; crouch back on the left foot, bending the knee of the left foot, give a short hop with the left foot pushing the body back with the right foot. During this slide bend the body forward gracefully. The idea is, as if one were dragging the forward foot back with an undulating motion of the body.

Another slide is done in this way: the girl puts her arm on her companion's shoulder, he puts his around her waist, each leaving the outside arm free; they face the same way, that is forward, and do a number of steps like the ordinary two-step, with a kick on every fourth beat. They continue running forward in this way, bending the knee with each forward slide. Of course, this has to be done very quickly. When they are in the midst of this, they suddenly catch hold of each other and two-step in the regular way, face to face, only much more rapidly than is customary. At the end of this measure, the girl bends back as far as possible, being firmly supported at the back of the waist by her partner. The quick two-step with the side drop, and the bending first of one partner then of the other, is the other principal part of the dance.

To make the bend more distinctive the "crouch" is used when both dancers fairly kneel upon the floor facing in opposite directions. She, with her right knee almost touching the floor, the left foot to the side, she with the knee bent, as in the illustration.

Done Very Quickly

Of course this movement is done very quickly. The photographs make one think it a slow and deliberate matter, but it isn't and you must dance it as if you were enjoying every movement.

The Tango as I dance it is a real lark. Enough of the two-step to keep to the music and then the variations slide, the short kick step, the rock and the Mexican glide, which I called the crouch.

Sometimes when I feel like it I slide away from my partner and do a short Spanish dance on the side while he beats time with hands and feet.

Stamping and beating the floor with the foot should be brought in wherever it is possible to accentuate the rhythm. And the dancer who wants to do the Tango without a partner can vary the arm movements by posing with one hand on the hip, the other behind the head.

The castanets should be used with an elusive movement, bringing both hands before the face, then down to the waist and extending the arms outward, then repeat. When the Spanish woman does this movement the air is full of grace and fascination, but it is likely to be simply ridiculous if one is not well trained, and I practiced it for hours before I was at all satisfied. The same is true of the Tango. It is not hard, but to dance it well and without effort requires many hours of work. However that, too, is fun.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

PA took me fishing last Saturday. I dident want to go, beekuss our mine was going to play Tom McNamee's nine in the afternoon, & Tom stole a ball from his big brother. His big brother had stole the ball from the ground keeper at the ball park & it was no use for the ground keeper to say anything, beekuss he had found the ball out in the grass when he was mowing the grass in the outfield & he dident have a rite to keep it.

Anyhow, Pa & me went fishing instead of playing. Pa kept talking about what a great fisher he was. I dident mind it much at first, beekuss Pa is all the time talking about a grate man he is anyhow, but after he toald about all the fish that he had caught all over the world I began to think he was like the rest of the fishermen.

Only Two Good Ones

You see, Bobbie, sed Pa to me, this crowd that is going out this afternoon is mostly green horns. There is only two good fishermen in the party, Mister Wilrich & myself. The others don't know an angle worm from a trout fly, Pa sed. Tom Hatty never caught a fish in his life, & if he did he wudent know whether to take the fish off the line or to take the hook off the line, & Mister Schneitlin, Pa Sed, the only fish he ever caught was a German carp that he found onst in a little pool of German carp is very intelligent fish, as Germans & carps go, sed Pa, but wen there isent enuff water in a pool for them to swim out, even a dunce could ketch one. Pa went on & tonld me about the rest of the people that was going, & he smoked every one of them except Mister Wilrich & himself.

The fish that we fished for was pickrel We went two in a boat & I was in the boat that Pa & Mister Wilrich was in, beekuss I was littel enuff to be out of the way. Pa & his frend had so much fishing tacked that thare wuddent have been room for the boat for three men. They had sixty different kinds of bait & each one of them had a watch with them. First Pa wud try a certain kind of a bait & if he dident git a bite in a minnit he wud look at his watch and say: It is now three o'clock. I must try this other kind of a spoon hook, beekuss pickrel never bite at any other kind of a bait between three o'clock & five minuits past three. Then Mister Wilrich would look at his watch, too, & then he wud change his bait. They must have thought that the pickrels had watches, for All I did was watch Pa & his frend watching thare watches & changing thare bait I dident have to watch any fish suffering beekuss thare wasen't any fish caught in our boat.

Not Biting

The fish are not biting today, comrade, sed Pa to his frend wen the sun was shining for the west.

You are right, sed Pa's frend. I only wish, he sed, that we could have caught one or two, just to show those green horns in the other boats what real pickrel looks like.

Wen we got to the shore thare was Mister Ratty & the other green horns. Mister Hatty had caught fifty pickrels with a pole he had brought along in the boat. He broke the reel & a lot of line, but he had fifty pickrels to show for it.

You doun't have to be a fancy fisherman in this world. Mister Hatty tonld me. All you have to do is bring hoam the fish.

They're So Troublesome!

THE Muddleborough Mail contained at least one really exciting piece of news last week.

"Mary," exclaimed Brown, as he perused the "M. M.," here's a paragraph about an accident at the Smiths', my dear! A seven months' baby blew itself clean through some gunpowder on the fire by mistake and was blown through the roof. Poor little!"

Mrs. Brown looked up dreamily from her book.

"Poor Mrs. Smith, you mean, Jim!" she said. "That's the fourth baby that little year who has left her without giving notice!"

Temporary Islands

THEIR APPEARANCE AND DISAPPEARANCE EPITOMIZES THE EARTH'S HISTORY

By Garrett P. Serviss

THE accompanying photograph shows one of the rarest of natural phenomena—a temporary island, which rose suddenly out of the sea, off the coast of Trinidad, on November 4 last, and which has now sunk so low that the water is fast overwhelming it. It has a crater in its centre, now nearly brimful of water, as the picture shows.

At the time that it sprang into being a volcanic explosion occurred in the sea bottom beneath, and what seemed a huge column of fire rose to a height of 400 or 500 feet above the water, surmounted by a cloud of smoke. The explosion was accompanied by a loud report heard at Chatham on the shore of Trinidad, and a blue flame, which seemed to shoot out sheerward, caused consternation among some of the inhabitants and many, it is reported, fled from their houses and took refuge in the bush, intimidated, perhaps, by remembrance of the fate of St. Pierre in Martinique, when a withering blast from Mount Pelee swept like a besom of fire over hundreds of square miles of territory and destroyed the city and nearly all its inhabitants.

After the volcanic phenomena ceased a new island was seen to have arisen off the coast, from twelve to fifteen feet high, and covering two or three acres, and in the midst of it was a steaming crater only a few feet in diameter. After a while some parties were bold enough to visit the new island, which was found to consist largely of hot mud. With the aid of planks the explorers were able to approach the crater, and there was a strong smell of sulphur and of oil. Now, as has been said, the island is rapidly sinking from sight.

One in Alaska

This is a miniature example of what has occasionally occurred in various parts of the world. Several years ago a new island, hundreds of feet in height, was thrust up out of the sea off the northeastern end of Alaska, in a neighborhood where similar things had happened before. These occurrences are more frequent in certain localities in the sea than on land, but once in a while a smoking hill rises out of the land, not far from the seashore.

THE DISAPPEARING ISLAND OFF THE COAST OF TRINIDAD.

A famous example of this is the "Monte Nuovo," or new mountain, which visitors to Naples may see near Posmioli, on the shore of the bay. Previous to October, 1538, there was no hill there, but a lake occupied a part of the site of the future mountain. After a long series of earthquakes the ground split open, and the astonished inhabitants of the neighborhood saw the earth beginning to swell up. Flashes of fire issued from it, and through the fissures formed in the ground a great mass of incandescent lava became visible. Heated rocks were shot forth, and the hill grew until it had attained a height of 400 or 800 feet, and it remains to this day with an elevation of 440 feet, although there are no longer any volcanic phenomena connected with it.

In 1811 the inhabitants of the island of Pantelleria, south of Sicily, in the Mediterranean Sea, were surprised to see a vast cloud of smoke rising from the sea, three miles from land. Bombs were hurled high in the air, from a crater which had swollen up from the bottom of the sea, and an island 1,500 feet long was quickly created. After a few days, when the volcanic activity had ceased, the island disappeared.

In the Past.

One of the most remarkable instances of the uprising of a new mountain is that of the volcano called Jorullo in Mexico. This began to spring into existence in a broad, elevated, fertile plain, more than 120 miles from any other volcano, on the night between September 28 and 29, 1759. It attained a height of more than 1,600 feet above the old plain, and it is still in existence. If Jorullo had risen from the sea bottom it would have formed a new island. Humboldt, in his "Cosmos," gives a dramatic description of the scene when this new mountain was formed. "The flat soil was seen to rise perceptibly, and the whole became more or less inflated, so that blisters appeared, of which the largest is now the volcano."

Such occurrences show that the earth is not free from the changes which in geological times have produced immense alterations in the level, and the condition, of various parts of its surface. In the course of ages noble continents have risen or sunk, new lands have been thrown up above the level of the sea and old lands have settled beneath it. Some of these changes are yet going on, but so slowly that only the most careful measurements of the elevation reveals these processes in miniature. Multiply the few months that the new island has existed off the shore of Trinidad by tens of thousands, and multiply its area in the same proportion; then substitute for the insects which may have haunted it during its brief existence the men and animals that inhabit the great lands of the globe, and you have an imaginary picture of the vicissitudes of the face of our world, which seems unchanging to us simply on account of the shortness of human life, and all human history, in comparison with the aeons of time that measure the life of a planet.

His Pleasure Spiked

IT was the first swim of the season, and the boys were plashing and splashing gleefully in the water. One youth, quite unclothed on shore, wistfully watching his companions disport themselves.

Tears and knuckles were in his eyes, and an interested stranger approached and asked the cause of the sorrow so plainly visible.

"I—boo—want to go in!" sobbed the boy.

"Then why don't you go?" inquired the stranger.

"'Cause I'm afraid," came the reply. "I'd get a whipping when I reached home, you see."

"But," pointed out his new-found friend, "aren't all those other boys risking a whipping, too?"

The little boy burst into a fresh paroxysm of sobbing grief.

"Yes," he replied, "but—my father's a professional athlete, and wears spikes in his shoes."

IOWA WOMAN WELL AGAIN

Freed From Shooting Pains, Spinal Weakness, Dizziness, by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Ottumwa, Iowa.—"For years I was almost a constant sufferer from female trouble in all its dreadful forms; shooting pains all over my body, sick headache, spinal weakness, dizziness, depression, and everything that was horrid. I tried many doctors in different parts of the United States, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than all the doctors. I feel it my duty to tell you these facts. My heart is full of gratitude to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for my health."—Mrs. HARRIET E. WAMPLER, 524 S. Ransom Street, Ottumwa, Iowa.

Consider Well This Advice.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for nearly forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Scores of thousands have bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

All these testimonials are guaranteed genuine and truthful. The original of each came to us entirely unsolicited. They are sincere expressions of gratitude for actual benefits received from the medicine.

Doctor Tells How to Shed Bad Complexion

We cannot restore degenerated facial tissue any more than we can restore a lost limb. It is useless to attempt to conceal a worn-out complexion into a new one. The rational procedure is to remove the blemishes instead—remove the devitalized cuticle. Not by surgical means, however, as the scarring cuts is too dire. Too tender, to withstand immediate exposure. Applied in a completely unnoticed way will gradually absorb the offending cuticle. By degrees, a new, youthful skin appears, a skin left and distinctly tinted as a rose petal.

No lady need hesitate to try this. Procure an ounce of mercolized wax at the druggist. Spread some of mercolized wax before retiring, removing the in the morning with soap and water. In from one to two weeks the complexion is completely transformed.

An ounce is sufficient to remove the worst complexion. Another ounce of powdered saxolite (to be had in tablet form) will banish the pimples that usually appear during the process. Dr. Robert Montesin in Popular Medicine.

A Mysterious Disappearance — One of the Greatest Detective Stories Ever Written — By Gordon Holmes

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

Copyright, 1905, by Edward J. Clode.

"WELL, Mr. Bruce, you propose to hand me £10 for my railway fare, and, say £5 for my existence, until we meet again in London, in exchange for which you purchase the rights in my life indefinitely, accidents and reasonable wear and tear excepted.

"Exactly!"

"Make it £20, with five louis down, and I accept."

"With the stipulation?"

"I want to back my dream. The number is twenty-three. It evidently was not thirteen. I want to see that thing through. I will back the red after twenty-three turns up, and if I lose I shall be quite satisfied."

"What if I refuse?"

"Then I don't care a bit what happens during the next seven days. After that, au revoir, should we happen to meet across the divide. Please make up your mind quickly. That run on the red may come and go while we are sitting here."

Bruce opened his pocketbook. "Here," he said with a smile. "I will give you four hundred francs. You will reach the maximum more quickly if you are right."

Mensmore's face lit up with exctitement. "By Jove, you are a brick," he said. "So you really trust me?"

"Yes."

"Then give me back my revolver."

Without a word, Bruce handed him the weapon.

Mensmore extracted the cartridges and threw them into a clump of shrubs.

"Come," he cried; "come with me to the Casino. You will see something. This is not my own luck; it is borrowed. Come quick!"

They raced off. Bruce himself being more fired with the zest of the thing than he cared to admit. Within the Casino all the tables were now crowded, but Mensmore hurried to that at which he sat during his earlier visit.

"It was here that I played in my dream," he whispered, "soon after I came to it."

He edged through the onlookers, closely followed by Bruce. Neither cared for the scowls and injured looks cast at them by the people whom they forced out of the way.

The Dream Number

The Italian, the winner of half an hour ago, had come back like a moth to the candle. Now he was getting his wings singed. At last, with a groan he hastily rose, but as a final effort flung the maximum, six thousand francs, on the black.

The disc whirled and slowly slackened pace, the ball rested in one of the high squares, and the croupier's monotonous words came:

"Vingt-trois, rouge, et passe!"

Out bounced the Italian, and Mensmore seized his chair, turning to Bruce with white face as he murmured:

"You hear! Twenty-three!"

The barrister nodded, and placed his hands on Mensmore's shoulder, as though to steady him.

Mensmore staked his ten louis on the red. They became twenty, then forty. Another whirl and they were eighty. A fourth made them one hundred and sixty.

Mensmore was now so agitated that the table and the players swam before his eyes. But Bruce, under the stress of exciting circumstances, had the gift of remaining preternaturally cool.

At the fifth coup the sum to Mensmore's credit credit was £256. He would have left it all on the table had not Bruce withdrawn £16 in notes, as the maximum bet is £240.

When Mensmore won the sixth and seventh coups a buzz of animated interest passed around the board. People began to note the run on the red, together with the fact that a man was staking the maximum each time. Even the croupiers casting glances at the new comer, when several times in succession, the long rake pushed across the table the little pile of money and notes.

Thenceforth Mensmore sat in a state of stupor more pronounced now that he was playing and awake than when he dreamed he was playing.

Each time he mechinically staked the maximum and received back twice as much, while the eyes around grew burnt into orbs of wonder that brought others running from all parts of the room.

But Bruce did not lose count.

When the red had turned up seventeen times and the amount to Mensmore's credit was £8,128 he shook the latter violently as he was about to shove forward another maximum, and, of his own volition, placed the money on the black.

"Douze, noir, pair et manque," sang out the croupier, and Bruce blessed into Mensmore's ear:

"Get up at once."

His strangely made acquaintance obeyed, gathered up his gold and notes, fastened them securely in an inner pocket, and the pair quitted the Casino amid extravagant protestations of good will and friendship from all the voluble foreigners present, having attracted not a little attention from the less demonstrative Americans and English in the room.

It was some time before the roulette tables began their orderly round again, for Mensmore's sensational performance was in everybody's mouth.

The highest recorded run is twenty-three on the black, but a run of eighteen on the red is sufficiently remarkable to keep Monte Carlo in talk for a week.

Albert Mensmore certainly could not complain that the events of the particular evening were dull. For one hour at least he lived in the fire that consumes, for he stepped back from the porch of dishonored death to find himself the possessor of a sum more than sufficient for his reasonable requirements.

The pace was rapid and almost fatal.

Some Good Resolutions

ONCE safe in the seclusion of Claude's sitting room, Mensmore almost collapsed. The strain had been a severe one, and now he had to pay the penalty by the way of reaction.

The barrister forced him to swallow a stiff brandy and soda, and then wished him to retire to rest, but the other protested with some show of animation.

"Let me talk, for goodness' sake!" he cried. I cannot be alone. You have seen me through a lot of trouble tonight. Stick to me for another hour, there's a good fellow."

"With pleasure. Perhaps it is the best thing you can do, after all. Let us see how much you have won."

Bruce made a calculation on a sheet of paper and said:

"Exclusive of the original stake of ten louis, you ought to have £8,128."

Mensmore pulled out of his pocket the crumply bundle of notes and bills Claude's notes were among them, and he tossed them across the table with a smile.

"There's your capital. I will see if the total is all right before we go shares."

Claude nodded, and Mensmore began to jot down the items of his valuable package. He bothered with the figures for some time, but could not get them right. Finally he tossed everything over to the other saying:

"No matter how I count, I can't get this calculation straight. Seventeen coups, beginning with ten louis, work out at £3,128, all right enough. But in this lot there is £4,000, and they don't pay twice at the Casino."

The barrister thought for a moment, and then laughed heartily. "I remember now," he said; "I kept careful count of the series of seventeen, or eighteen, to be exact. On my own account, as you were too dazed to notice anything, I put a maximum on the black. Your dream turned up trumps, as the series stopped and black won. Hence the odd £240."

"Then that is yours," said the other gravely. "I will take £1,128 to square all my debts, and we go shares in the balance, a thousand each, if you think that fair. If not I will gladly hand over the lot, after paying my debts, I mean."

Mensmore's seriousness impressed the barrister more than any other incident of that dramatic evening.

"You forget," he replied, "that I told you I had money in plenty for my own needs. You must keep every farthing except my own £5, which you do not now need. No. Please do not argue. This turn of Fortune's wheel should provide you with sufficient capital to launch out earnestly in your career, whatever it be, and I will ask my interest in different manner."

"I can never repay you, in gratitude, at any rate. And here is another week I will be thankful to you when she knows. Ask anything you like. Make any stipulation you please. I agree to it."

"It is a bargain. Sign this."

Bruce took a sheet of note paper, bearing the crest of the Hotel du Cercle, dated it, and wrote:

"I promise that, for the space of twelve months, I will not make a bet of any sort, or gamble at any game of chance."

When Mensmore read the document his face fell a little. "Won't you except pigeon shooting?" he said. "I am sure to beat that Russian next time."

"I can allow no exceptions."

"But why limit me for twelve months?"

"Because it is that time you do not gamble enough to stop risking your happiness, even your life, upon the turn of a card or the flight of a bird, the sooner thereafter you shoot yourself the less trouble you will bring upon those connected with you."

"You are a rum chap," murmured Mensmore, "and you put matters pretty straight, too. However, here goes. You don't back me from entering for sweepstakes."

He signed the paper and passed it over to Bruce, while the latter did not comment upon the limitation of his intentions imposed by Mensmore's final sentence. The man undoubtedly was a good shot, and, betting his residence on the Riviera, he might pick up some valuable prizes.

"And now," said the barrister, "may I ask as a friend to what use you intend to put your newly found wealth?"

"Oh, that is simple enough. I have to pay £600 which I lost in bets over that beastly unlucky match. Then I have a splendid 'spec,' into which I will now be able to place about £2,000—a thing which I have good reason to believe will bring me in at least ten thou' within the year, and there is nearly a thousand pounds to go on with. And all thanks to you."

"Never mind thanking me. I am only too glad to have taken such a part in the affair. I will not forget this slight as long as I live."

"Nor I. Just think of it. I might be lying in the gardens now or in some mortuary, with half my head blown off."

"Tell me," said Bruce, between the contemplative puffs of a cigar, "what induced you to think of suicide?"

"It was a combination of circumstances," replied the other. "You must understand that I was somewhat worried about financial and family matters when I came to Monte Carlo. It was not to gamble, in a sense, that I remained here. I have loafed about the world a good deal, but I may honestly say I never made a fool of myself at cards or backing horses. At most kinds of sports I am fairly proficient, and in pigeon shooting, which goes on here extensively, I am undoubtedly an expert. For instance, in this season I have kept myself in funds by means of those competitions."

His hearer nodded approvingly.

Copper Stocks Selling Lower In Tame Trading

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, June 11.—Midday.—The Boston stock market was fairly active during the morning but the price tendency was downward. Most of the trading in copper issues was on a lower level. Among those which suffered the greatest losses during the first hour were Lake, Granby and Calumet & Arizona. Among others to decline fractionally were Isle Royale, Copper Range, Boston & Corbin and Miami.

Aside from that list there were American Telephone, American Zinc and United Fruit in the recessional group.

Weakness of the New York market affected trading here.

The very latest reports from Houghton regarding Hancock is a dispatch saying: "The bottom of the Hancock shaft has cut what looks like the hanging wall of the Pewabic vein. The shaft is now four feet in the vein with good copper all over the bottom of the shaft at a depth of 2,654 feet."

A New York dispatch says a special meeting of the Standard Oil Company of California has been called for July 30 to authorize an increase in stock from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000, and that shareholders will be permitted to subscribe for the new issue at par.

Hard Coalers Weak at Start.

The New York market was dull and hesitating at the opening with anthracite roads most prominent in the trading. There was a very limited demand for even the usually active issues. Offerings were small but if the volume was small it was sufficient to cause an easing off in prices. Traders were in a waiting mood. After opening at 169¾, a gain of ¼ over Monday's closing, Reading reacted to 167¾. Lehigh Valley opened ¾ lower at 177, then went to 172¾. St. Paul was plentifully sold and lost ½, Union Pacific developed weakness after the first few minutes, losing ⅝ to 168⅛. The possibility of a strike vote by employees of the Pennsylvania Railroad had little effect. Tone steady, opened ⅛ lower. Traders expressed the opinion that as a result of the political suspense and the long period of indecision which must prevail over the United States Supreme Court's decision in the hard coal and Union Pacific merger cases the market will continue to show a waiting tendency for some time. Steel sold ⅛ lower, and Amalgamated was off ⅝. American Smelting was ¼ lower. Canadian Pacific lost ⅛.

The Curb was irregular.

Americans in London were also irregular and business in them was light and professional. Canadian Pacific was dull there.

The copper metal market opened firm in London with spot and futures each 2s. 6d. higher.

Copper Metal and Mining.

It is reported that the copper metal market is ruled at 16 cents. Most leading producers and selling agents are standing firm for 17½ cents as against 16½ cents a week ago. It is learned that the consumers demand for July and August deliveries is also at 17½ cents. The market is reported another rise in price is not unlikely, though all economic conditions favor a continued production of the metal at present. Henry H. Merton & Co. of London say: "Copper appears likely to be on a larger scale than ever before. The activity which has been promoted by the recent squeeze in the market is going on apace, and the consumers' interest in the metal is now more insistent. It is hardly possible that the present rate of production can be maintained for the rest of the year, while the rapid development of the United States has brought about a similar state of affairs in the European side of the Atlantic."

A Houghton dispatch states that copper is showing predictable at once the limits of the Hancock shaft and while the formation looks like stringers, there is no doubt that it will be followed to be the Pewabic lode. It is also reported that Hancock is now nearing Amnor Coffon vein and that the Boston attorneys are preparing to appeal from the decision of the Federal court in Cleveland in the Federal court in Cleveland.

Utah & Nevada says: Advices received in this city late last night and early this morning and on Monday there was a little more copper produced than was expected. The output for the month of June will be from 3,000 to 3,500 tons. This is the formation on No. 3 level. This lode more than 40 feet wide and is of good grade. The diamond drill cores. The drifts in the stope copper is coming in commercial quantities. They have been suspected by the Utah & Nevada in a drift in the other direction 120 feet."

Hard Coal Price Probing.

The New York Merchants' Association committee which has under the terms of the agreement with the coal men named as soon as operators and miners had signed the agreement, to investigate the coal roads for advice and cooperation, Producers' prices have been fixed at $4.85 a ton for the coal twenty-five cents a ton, but left the price of domestic sizes unchanged. There are also to be interstate points. They have been suspected by the Utah & Nevada in a drift in the other direction 120 feet."

The New York committee says, in inviting the co-operation of the Federal government:

"The cost of transportation is a vital factor in the cost of coal.

"There is Federal supervision of the railroads. Chief Clerk Neill of the Bureau of Labor will promote co-operation in the investigation. Commissioner in the government will assist in every way possible. The committee expects at least, as the United States Supreme Court has already allowed one rate."

Bank of Germany Cuts Rate.

As was expected, the Imperial Bank of Germany today reduced its minimum rate from 6 to 5 per cent. The last change in the rate was made on Feb. 5, 1912, when it was raised from 5 to 6 per cent. The bank's statement, which for the week ended June 7 showed a decrease in gold holdings of 25,661,000 marks and at the same time note circulation decreased 215,000 marks. The Imperial Bank of Berlin has called Sunday for a meeting of the political economists to discuss the present status of finance and business. Dispatches from Berlin say that the meeting is called because of the recent reduction in the bank rate. It is stated that the German export trade has suffered greatly from the high rate which has much hampered its foundations, while crop prospects are favorable. There has been some trepidation in Berlin, because of reports that the situation in the United States is becoming more serious. However if there is danger of one, until half-yearly statements are issued.

Financial News in Brief.

The Wilson wheat percentage for yesterday's government report is said to be better than the report figure, and the latter estimate of 70 per cent. is considered conservative.

Prof. Marquette receives from the condition of Pere Marquette preferred stockholders in New England, which has been organized of late to protect their interests, permission to issue $3,500,000 of 5 per cent. certificates, of which $1,600,000 will be used to pay off maturing obligations, and the remaining $1,900,000 will be applied for improvements.

There was some disappointment among bulls over the United States Steel Corporation's May statement of unfilled tonnage, which showed that there would be an increase of 200,000 tons—not making mention of the fact that the increase in finished product recently turned out by plants operating at practically capacity is offset by the 6,750,983 tons of unfilled business will keep the corporation's plants busy for only 60 days, if running at 84 per cent. of capacity. It is the largest unfilled tonnage since 1910, when it was 8,000,000 tons.

The Senate amendment, permitting railroad pools to use the Panama Canal, to the Panama bill is regarded as especially for the benefit of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. The amendment will be bitterly fought in the Senate and may have no in the House.

The Consolidated Car Heating Company has increased its regular dividend rate from 4 to 5 per cent. per annum, and declared an extra dividend of 2 per cent., payable July 1. It was elected president of the company.

Directors of the Atchison declared a 2½ per cent. Kansas City, Orient and Mexico road receivers' certificates bought by J. P. Morgan & Co., Boston, will be used for extending the line from Orient 100 miles from Eldorado to Fort Stockton.

The New York up-State Public Service Commission has authorized the Delaware & Hudson Railroad Company to issue its twenty-five-year 4½ per cent. improvement bonds to the amount of $1,000,000. The proceeds are to be used for improvements and the issue is guaranteed by the New York Central.

The Canadian government estimates that Americans who have left the Dominion to settle in the Dominion took $25,000,000 in cash with them. It is said that the value of all of the chattels which crossed the line in April last numbered 21,494.

Thomas G. Yerkes & Co. of Philadelphia say that earnings of Baltimore & Ohio available for common dividends in the year ended June 30 will be equivalent to $9.75 per share on the common stock. In the 1911 fiscal year the common dividend balance was equivalent to $8.60 per share of stock.

James K. Hill says that Great Northern earnings both gross and net have been running ahead of the figures of the corresponding period of last year.

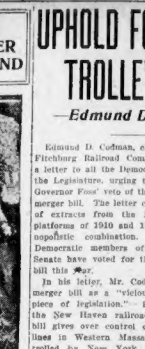
GABY DESLYS, WHO HAS TIRED OF HER YANKEE HUSBAND



GABY DESLYS

PARIS, June 11.—Gaby Deslys, the famous French dancer, it is reported in Parisian theatrical circles, is now stricken with ennui toward her imported husband, Harry Pilcer. They have agreed to live apart from each other, although as yet there has been no legal move for a divorce, it is stated.

Some say that the cause of the trouble was an incident which occurred in Berlin not long ago and that the garrulous Gaby was the one at fault.

Harry Pilcer taught Gaby about everything she knew about dancing. She sailed from these shores on the same vessel Pilcer took his departure.

After the pair reached London it was reported they had been married in Queenstown, as soon as possible after leaving the ship.

Marinelli, manager of Gaby Deslys, would not believe such an event possible. The dancer herself, finding it equally embarrassing to make an admission or a denial of her marriage, refused to talk at all about herself, or to see any one primed with annoying questions.

As to the durability of her affections, it may be recalled that in one of her interviews while here she remarked:

"Love passes. It comes and goes. One finds one's ideal, loses it and goes about seeking for another."

UPHOLD FOSS IN TROLLEY VETO

—Edmund D. Codnan.

Edmund D. Codman, ex-president of the Fitchburg Railroad Company, today sent a letter to all the Democratic members of the Legislature, urging them to stand by Governor Foss' veto of the Western trolley merger bill. The letter contains a number of extracts from the Democratic State platforms of 1910 and 1911 opposing monopolistic combination. A number of Democratic members of the House and Senate have voted for the trolley merger bill this year.

In his letter, Mr. Codman attacks the merger bill as a "viciously, undemocratic piece of legislation." He declares that the New Haven railroad, to which the bill gives over control of all the trolley lines in Western Massachusetts, is controlled by New York interests and is subservient to "parasite organizations like the American Express Company."

LASELL PRIZES FOR BREAD-MAKING

Girls, lots of you are bread winners, but how about that now almost gone-out-of-fashion art of making bread? Today in connection with the commencement exercises at Lasell Seminary they awarded the gold prize for bread-making to Miss Mildred Otto. The second prize went to Miss Laura Williams. Miss Alma Bunch received honorable mention.

The commencement exercises were held in the Auburndale Congregational Church. Dr. Winslow, the principal, presented diplomas to thirty-three graduates.

The commencement address was by the Rev. Alexander R. Tuttle, D. D., of Summitt, N. J.

Certificates in household economics were awarded to Dorothea Africa, Grace Alexander, Ruth Batchelder, Emily Butterworth, Gertrude Coulter, Maude Dunlap, Mildred Hall, Charlotte Leah, Marion McArthur, Annie Merrill, Ethel Moore, Esther Morey, Ruth Riesey, Amelia Rosenbaum, Ellnor Ryan, Mary Utter, Winifred Whitlesey, Juliette Beach, Helen Beardsley, Jeanne Bennett, Elizabeth Farnham, Adele McDonald, Mildred Otto, Ruth Stokes, Clara Townsend, Florence Wallace and Laura Wilson.

Certificates in pianoforte were awarded to Mary Goodwillie, Mildred Hall, Florence Jones, Ruth Jones, Pamela Spargo, Ruth Vollrath, Rosaltha Williams, in bookkeeping to Mary Ryder and in stenography to Mary Ryder.

COMPOSER GLUCK'S LETTERS GO HIGH

BERLIN, June 11.—High prices were obtained at auction for autograph letters of the composer Gluck. Four letters brought $2,075. An official document giving notice of Gluck's appointment as Germant court composer, brought $125.

THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY VICTORY AND THE LESSON THAT MAY BE LEARNED FROM IT

And That Is: That When the People Know What They Want, and Are United in Demanding It, Not Even as Big a Monopoly as the "New England Lines" Can Keep It Away From Them—We Hope This Victory May Have Impressed the People as It Must Have Impressed the Railroads

BRINGING THE GRAND TRUNK TO BOSTON

Reduced Fac-simile Headlines, Showing How the AMERICAN, in Both Editorial and News Pages, Acted as the Mouthpiece of the People in Their Fight to Bring Grand Trunk to Boston.

WHEN Governor Foss yesterday signed the Grand Trunk Railway bill, the people of Massachusetts had won the MOST NOTABLE LEGISLATIVE VICTORY OF THIS GENERATION. And they had won it ALONE. The AMERICAN congratulates them.

There has been no better example of the power of united public opinion in the time of men now living than this success of the Grand Trunk Railway movement in New England.

One of the greatest monopolies in all the United States desired above everything else to KEEP THE GRAND TRUNK OUT. The people wanted the Grand Trunk IN. And the Grand Trunk is COMING IN.

The transportation monopoly received the support of OTHER monopolies. It found favor with the monopolistic press. It sent paid emissaries to Canada. It organized and led a campaign of trickery and deceit before the Legislature. It made use of EVERY TRICK KNOWN TO THE LEGISLATIVE AGENT. And it failed.

WHY did it fail?

It failed because the people were united in ONE cause, for ONE purpose.

It failed because the people were WELL INFORMED AND WATCHFUL. It failed because the members of the Legislature KNEW that the people were well informed and watchful.

And so, because, for once, the people of Massachusetts WERE united and well informed and watchful, Boston is about to become the ONLY PORT OF THE FIRST CLASS IN THE UNITED STATES TO HAVE A DIRECT RAILWAY CONNECTION WITH A PORT ON THE OTHER SIDE OF THE CONTINENT. When the Southern New England is constructed from Boston up to White River Junction, and when the Grand Trunk Pacific has been built a few hundred miles more through the Rockies, freight and passengers can be carried on an uninterrupted journey 3,500 miles from Boston to Prince Rupert.

And what PROMISED to be one of the wonders of the world, the New England transportation monopoly, will have been broken. The Grand Trunk will be serving the people of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

We say, AGAIN, that all of this has been done by the people, by the POPULAR DEMAND FOR ANOTHER RAILROAD. We have no doubt that by this time the fact is impressed upon the minds of President Mellen and Vice-President Byrnes and their masters in New York. We hope, with all our heart, that it may also be impressed upon the minds of President Fitzhugh of the Southern New England, President Chamberlin of the parent Grand Trunk and THEIR MASTERS, in London.

NO railroad can have things all its own way, or mostly its own way, in these New England States, which snaps its fingers at public opinion and FAILS TO GIVE THIS GREAT TERRITORY A SQUARE DEAL.

When, in the early part of last year, there was TALK of bringing the Grand Trunk to Boston, it was suggested to the AMERICAN that the Grand Trunk Railway would come to Boston "IF THE PEOPLE WANTED IT TO COME."

The AMERICAN THOUGHT it knew that the people wanted the Grand Trunk. It DETERMINED TO MAKE SURE. And so, fourteen months ago, the AMERICAN presented the form of a petition to its readers and called for 100,000 SIGNATURES. This petition, 100,000 strong, was finally forwarded to the Montreal offices of the Grand Trunk Railway ONE YEAR AGO, on June 3.

In this great and victorious campaign of the people, the Boston AMERICAN has served merely as an instrument, an organ, the mouthpiece. And the AMERICAN is proud that it was able to render this service.

The members of the Legislature of 1911, who, at the suggestion of the AMERICAN, voted unanimously to invite the Grand Trunk; the members of the Boston City Council, who extended a similar invitation; Mayor Fitzgerald who, forwarding a copy of the Council's vote, added an expression of his own friendly interest; by these was the Grand Trunk Railway campaign begun.

The great Chamber of Commerce of Boston—foully but unsuccessfully misrepresented in the closing hours of the movement—and Mr. David O. Ives, the Chamber's transportation expert; the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, the Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange, the Boards of Trade of Haverhill, Lowell, Worcester and a score of other cities and towns, these GAVE THE MOVEMENT IMPETUS AND MADE IT IRRESISTIBLE.

It would require a full page of the AMERICAN to name the individuals and organizations who come out of this great struggle worthy of HONORABLE MENTION. The Directors of the Port of Boston, the members of the Board of Railroad Commissioners, EVERYBODY IN OFFICIAL STATION, appear to have considered, first, the popular demand, secondly, the good of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and, beside these, nothing.

Nor would it be fair to close this brief review of the campaign without just tribute to the ability and intelligence of the Hon. John H. Schoonmaker of Ware, Chairman of the legislative Committee on Railroads. At first suspicious of the Canadian railroad men, Senator Schoonmaker seems finally to have been impressed with their sincerity and with the importance of the public demand, and to have shaped his course accordingly. His handling of the bill over the occasionally rough waters of the Senate was masterful.

But the BEDROCK of the movement, the CORNER STONE of this achievement, was the petition NOT OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN but of 100,000 readers of this newspaper.

The AMERICAN, therefore, tenders its heartiest congratulations to the people of New England and awaits their further pleasure.
